GAS EXPLOSION AT WYALUSING

Henry Middendorf Terribly Injured in Cellar of Middendorf Hotel.

LEAKY ACETYLINE GAS JET RESPONSIBLE FOR ACCIDENT

Explosion Was Heard All Over Village—Man Sitting in Hotel Office Blown Half Way Across Room—Mr. Middendorf Will Probably Recover.

A leaky acetyline gas jet was responsible for a terrific explosion in the cellar of the Middendorgf hotel at Wyalusing ursday afternoon, in which Henry Middendorf had a miraculous escape from instant death.

As it is he is terribly burned about the face, head and arms, and while his condition is very serious, Dr. Boswell, the attending physician, thinks he will recover.

Story of the Accident.

In the cellar of the Middendorf hotel, which is one of the most modern and up-to-date hostelries to be found in this section, is located the cooler in which is kept the liquors dispensed at the bar. This cooler is 14 feet square, and is constructed of plank and concrete, the walls being 20 inches thick. It is air tight, and the only opening is a door about five feet high. The cooler sits down in the ground about 18 inches, and when the door is opened it is necessary to step down a short distance to reach the bottom. It is lighted by acetyline gas, a single jet being inside the cooler.

Thursday morning about 10:30, Henry Middendorf, who is managing the hotel during the absence of his brother, Joseph Middendorf, the owner, went into the cellar to place a keg of beer in the cooler. He lighted a match, took hold of the door leading to the cooler, pulling it slightly ajar. Instantly there was a blinding flash and a terrific explosion.

Mr. Middendorf was hurled across the cellar, and although he was terribly injured, he did not lose consciousness and was able to call for help. He was removed to a room in the hotel, and Dr. Boswell hastily summoned.

Examination showed that Mr. Middendorf had been burned in a terrible manner about the face, head and arms. Nearly all the hair was burned from his head, eyes and lips badly blistered, and the arms were both badly burned, the sleeves being burned from his coat and shirts.

Force of the Explosion.

Some idea of the force of the explosion is to be had in the fact that one of the 20-inch walls of the cooler was blown out, and the interior of the cellar badly wrecked. Many cans of fruit and other stores in the cellar were ruined by the explosion.

In the upper part of the hotel two doors were racked from their hinges, the tables in the dining room were raised from the floor about 18 inches, coming down with a crash. A man sitting in the hotel office was transferred to a place half way across the room without leaving his chair. Persons in other parts of the hotel were bowled about like ten pins.

The force of the explosion was felt all over the borough, windows being shaken as if an earthquake was at work.

Cause of the Accident.

The explosion is believed to have been caused by a leaky gas jet. The jet in the cooler had been turned off, and it is presumed that this leaked, the gas being confined in the airtight compartment, and readily igniting on the flaming match in Mr. Middendorf's hand when he pulled the heavy door ajar.

Factional Fight Ended.

A conflict between opposing factions of the Pittston City Council ended Thursday when Judge Fuller dendered a decision favoring the faction in power. Major John T. Flannery, the former city clerk who was ousted from office when Thomas J. Murphy was elected, has kept the minute book of the Council and refused to turn it over, being backed in his stand by a number of Councilmen. Judge Fuller issued orders for Flannery to deliver the look without delay, and the City Council can now proceed with its business.

PENNSY'S NEW FISH LAW HAS BEEN DRAFTED.

Some New Ideas Entirely Different From Those in Present Law.

Representatives of 30 counties, gathered at Harrisburg for two days for the purpose of drafting a new fish law completed their work Friday last. The draft contains some entirely new ideas from existing legislation. They are as follows:

Forbiddding sale of illegal devices; penalty, $100.

Authorizing the setting aside of small streams for nurseries in which fishing shall be prohibited.

Making it unlawful to take fish from a licensed device except by the owner or his authority. Any one, however, may remove a game fish from a fish basket and return it to the water.

Defining trout streams as streams in which trout are present, either naturally or by propogation.

Directing persons engaged in selling trout to report annually to the Department of fisheries for statistical purposes.

The last section is filled with important propositions, which, if enacted, will assist materially in fish protection and propogation.

One of these abolishes the pernicious system of paying special wardens. Special warden, instead are to be appointed and paid by the day instead of receiving half the fine, as under the present system. The per day pay is to be fixed by the Fisheries Commission. The state treasury is to receive all the fines, instead of only half of each.

In addition to recommending this change in special wardens pay, the conference agreed upon 30 regular wardens at $75 per month, and a chief warden at $100. Now only 12 are allowed, including the chief, and his salary is $60, fixed by the Fisheries Commission.

Other important sections of the new draft are as follows:

Allowing commercial hatcheries to sell game or food fish at all times upon paying $50 for a license from the Department of Fisheries; books and property must be open to inspection by the fish commissioner.

Forbidding sale of wild trout; permitting sale of artificial bred trout prohibiting hiring persons to catch trout; permitting employment of guides.

Forbidding sale of fresh dead fish wherever caught during the close season, or fresh food fish for more than six days after the season closes.

Forbidding trespass with intent to fish on state hatcheries, penalty $100; forbidding similar trespass on commercial hatcheries, penalty $50; forbidding similar trespass or hatcheries conducted not for profit, penalty $10.

Forbidding trespass of domestic water fowl on any hatcheries and giving authority to shoot fish-eating animals or birds after five days' notice to the owners of such animals or birds.

New license fees on nets, as follows: Seine, $5; dip, $1; steel pots and fykes, $1, for each ten or fraction thereof.

MET TRAGIC FATE.

Husband of Former Towanda Girl Killed by Cars at Carbondale.

The Carbondale Leader in its issue of Nov. 3, printed the following item concerning the tragic death of Elmer Miller, whose wife before her marriage was Miss Rose Emery, granddaughter of George Emery, now a resident of Asylum township. She will be remembered by many friends:

"The tragic death of Conductor Elmer Miller has caused a mantle of gloom to overspread the Delaware and Hudson lines from Wilkes-Barre to Oneonta. Deceased was a man well known and well liked. If he could not speak well of a person he would say nothing. His disposition was of the most genial and to form his acquaintance was to like him. He was one of the youngest conductors on the division, a hard and willing worker and competent in every sense. Just how Mr. Miller met his death is not known, but as near as can be learned it is very evident he slipped and fell while out on the train between Jefferson Junction and Lanesboro as that is where his body was found shortly after by the train crew. The most heartfelt sympathy is extended to the bereaved family."

MRS. McKEAN 101 YEARS OLD

Towanda's Oldest Resident Observed Anniversary on Saturday.

MANY FRIENDS CALLED ON HER DURING THE DAY

With the Exception of Impaired Eyesight, This Remarkable Lady is in Possession of All Her Faculties—Longs to Ride Horse Back Again.

Mrs. Eliza McKean, one of the oldest and most remarkable ladies in Pennsylvania, quietly observed her 101st birthday at the family home on Third street in Towanda on Saturday.

In contrast to her one hundredth anniversary, the day was quietly spent, without formalities. Last year, the Bradford County Historical society presented her with a silver tray appropriately inscribed and friends presented her with a purse of $130 in gold. On Saturday, neighbors and friends took occasion to call at the home, and presented Mrs. McKean with many pretty and substantial tokens, all being received by the venerable lady in a most charming manner.

With the exception of impaired eyesight, Mrs. McKean is in full possession of her faculties, and is as bright as a woman half her years.

MRS. ELIZA A. McKEAN.

In conversation with C. F. Heverly, the well known historian on Saturday, Mrs. McKean expressed a wish that she might again ride horseback as she did when a girl. It was her favorite pastime, and she remembers well the pleasures she enjoyed in the days of her youth, and longs for them again.

Mrs. McKean, who is undoubtedly the oldest person in the county, was born in Litchfield, Herkimer county, N. Y., on Sunday, Nov. 14, 1807. She was the second child of Truman and Mrs. Merry, English people who were among the early settlers in Herkimer county. Truman Merry, the father, moved his family to Bradford county in 1821, settling in Troy township. There Eliza Merry grew to young womanhood and lived with her parents until her marriage to Allen McKean, a prominent citizen of West Burlington. After their marriage they lived in West Burlington until 1848 when they moved to Towanda. Mr. McKean having been elected prothonotary, an office he held for 12 years. Two children, LeRoy and Eliza McKean were born to Mr. and Mrs. McKean, both living with the mother. Mr. McKean, the husband and father died on April 6, 1886.

Mrs. McKean has one brother living, Charles T. Merry of Kansas City, Mo. Truman Merry, their father died at the age of 80 while their mother died comparatively young.

Mrs. McKean, during her long residence in Towanda, has endeared herself within a large circle of friends, who wish her many more happy returns of the day.

Grievance Committee to Meet

Representatives from every division of the road will attend the meeting and a list of grievances to be submitted later to the officials of the railroad will be discussed.

Sayre Loses Band Leader.

James Daly, for many years leader of the R. A. Packer band and during the past year leader of the Lehigh shop band, has been ordered by the Lehigh Valley railroad company to go to Buffalo where he will be a member of the auditing staff of the Buffalo division of the company, and will be obliged to remove to that place at once.

PENNSYLVANIA TOWN VIOLATES U. S. LAW.

Borough of Sunbury Tried to Stop Outside Competition.

The Citizens' Wholesale Supply company of Columbus, Ohio, has entered suit in the United States court to recover $2,255 costs, to which they were put in various lawsuits in which they were plaintiffs in actions which they brought against The Merchants' and Businessmen's association, of Sunbury.

The case is a most important one, as it affects every municipality and business man in the country.

The Citizens' Wholesale company of Columbus, Ohio, appears to be a mail order house. Some time ago the company entered into competition with the retail business men of Sunbury in supplying customers with goods. These were delivered in wagons by employes of the Ohio firm. In order to combat the opposition of a foreign firm on their own ground, a large number of the Sunbury merchants formed a local combination of their own, which they called The Merchant's and Traders' Business association. The association was instrumental in having an ordinance passed in the Sunbury councils, which prohibited any other person or corporation other than the merchants and business men of Sunbury from delivering goods within the city limits without a license.

The Citizens' Wholesale Supply company tested the legality of the ordinance in the Northumberland county court, where they lost; then in the supreme courts of Pennsylvania, and finally the case was brought into the federal courts, winding up in the supreme court of the United States, which declared that the Sunbury ordinance was unconstitutional, being contrary to the Interstate Commerce act, inasmuch as it permitted the merchants of Sunbury to carry on their trade without a license, while it demanded one from those who did not reside in that city.

Robbers Confess.

Says the Montrose Independent Republican: "In court this week "Yorky" Johnson and William Wandell, the robbers who tortured Edwin Hartley at his home near Glenwood in an attempt to extort money from him, surprised many by pleading guilty to the charges brought against them. Sheriff Pritchard in a conversation attributed the action of these men as a direct result of the meetings being held by weekly in the jail, at which the divine principles have been expounded to the inmates. Other results have been noticed and the sheriff is quite loud in his praise of those who have been conducting them, Rev. Mr. Soloini and E. D. Bronson."

They Settled.

Special Officer Arthur C. Watson went to Sayre Saturday with warrants issued by 'Squire Orcutt on complaint of Guy C. Hollon, charging a number of Sayre young men with larceny by bailee. These young men sold their railroad time to Mr. Hollon, drew their pay as usual ,and failed to make good. Officer Watson, assisted by Constable Ritz, rounded up eleven of the accused and took them before Justice Nelson, where they settled, and the complaints were withdrawn.

Lehigh and Semi-Monthly Pay.

Says the Elmira Star-Gazette: "When the Lehigh Valley employes were paid the other day they received semi-monthly pay checks though they were not paid semi-monthly in the sense of the law. The Lehigh, like the other roads, is waiving the matter pending a decision on the constitutionality of the act. The checks distributed to the men divided their pay, one being pay for the period from Oct. 1 to 15 and the other from Oct. 16 to 31."

Waverly Hotel Sold.

The Tioga hotel on Elizabeth street in Waverly, one of the oldest inns in that village has been sold at public auction by I. Grant. Dodge to John Peckally, an Italian grocer, who purchased the building for $5,000. It is believed that he purchased it for other parties.

SAVED FLAG BY RISKING LIVES

New York Firemen Keep Old Glory Flying in Breeze Above Flames.

FINE EXHIBITION OF AMERICAN BRAVERY.

Stores Worth Thousands of Dollars, and Vaulable Records Saved From Destruction by Heroism of Men at The Engines.

New York, Nov. 17.—Clinging to the fire escapes of a big warehouse, Lieutenant Pratt and his men of the fireboat New Yorker kept streams playing on the roof of a government structure across the street through which flames were bursting.

The fire surrounded the base of a fifty foot staff from which an American flag 8 by 16 feet in dimensions flapped bravely in a stiff breeze. The firemen saved the flag and undoubtedly saved lives in doing so, for had the pole torn from its fastenings it must have crashed into the street below.

The flames swept through the sixth floor of the government warehouse, destroying fully $50,000 worth of flags, tents, blankets and other army equipment, according to Captain Edwin Wolf, U. S. A., who is in charge.

The firemen were able to confine the fire to the sixth floor, however, and thus saved $100,000 worth of medical supplies on the floors below. Had these supplies been destroyed the army medical department might have been temporarily crippled. Chief Croker stated that the total damage will approximate $100,000.

There are three such warehouses in the country, the other two being at St. Louis and San Francisco. The New York warehouse is the largest. Valuable records, some of which extend back twenty years and contain statistics and data which could not be duplicated, are kept in offices on the fifth floor. These were carried to the third floor by Captain Wolf and his men working under a rain of falling firebrands and rushing water.

The new water pressure system was used effectively.

THREE HEALTH HUNTERS DONATE TO GAME COMMISSION.

Game Protector Shoemaker Takes Them Into Custody Near Wyalusing.

Northern Pennsylvania and especially Bradford county is a very healthy place, but not so for law violators, as three New York state men will attest to.

For the past three years three or four men have been coming from Brooklyn, N. Y., to Wyalusing, where they were met at the station and taken to a farmer's home five or six miles distance. During the day these men, it is alleged, would walk through the fields and woods wearing hunting coats ,and carrying guns. When asked what they were doing they would always would reply "just out for our health."

This week they made their annual visit to the county, and on Thursday they were taken into custody by Game Warden Shoemaker and each donated $25 to the State Game Commission, after which they were allowed to depart.

Warden Shoemaker found the men in a field and acting under the law of April 14, 1903, which says: "That the possession of a gun in fields or in forests, or on the waters of the commonwealth by a non-resident shall be prima-facie evidence of a violation of its provisions," collected the usual fines.

The men gave their names as C. C. Wissel, Brewster Wilson, and Henry Hessner. One of them claimed to be an ex-state senator of New York. They have returned to Brooklyn.

One Year For Carrying Weapons.

Convicted Saturday of carrying concealed weapons, Francesco Luchere was sentenced by Judge Lynch at Wilkes-Barre to spend a year in the county jail. He was also ordered to pay a fine of $100 to the commonwealth and the costs of prosecution.

THE ELUSIVE SUSIE BUTTERS AGAIN LOCATED.

This Time She is Tagged in LeRaysville, Bradford County.

Miss Susie Butters, who was recently located in Warren township, this county, and induced to return to her home at Elmira Heights, has evidently been "located" again. This time the elusive Susie, who seems to be playing the title role in the "Missing Miss," is tagged in LeRaysville.

Here is what the Elmira Advertiser says about it:

"After two weeks of continued searching Chief of Police G. A. Horton of Elmira Heights, has located the much wanted Susie Butters, who some time ago disappeared from her home in that village. Last week Chief Horton received a letter from Frank Frisbee, who resides at South Warren, Pa., which stated that the Butters girl was in LeRaysville, a village four miles from South Warren. Not entirely satisfied with the information Chief Horton wrote to the postmaster in that place asking for further information and received the assurance that the girl was there.

"Chief Horton stated he did not know who the Butters girl was with or what she was doing in LeRaysville. He expects to write for further particulars before taking any action .

"The chief stated that Mrs. Butters was convinced before the recent information was received that her daughter had been married to Paul Pritchard and was living in Sayre. This the chief states positively is not so.

"Chief Horton stated further that he believes the girl went away with Joe Bettis, who was held in Towanda, and recently sentenced to the Eastern Penitentiary for four years for assault with intent to kill and attempted jail breaking."

OWEGO POLICE REWARDED.

Get $200 From Government for Capture of "Yeggman."

Thursday morning Chief of Police William E. Allen of Owego, was surprised to receive from the United States government a check for $200, which was the reward for the arrest of the burglar, Thomas Romer, alias "Kid" O'Brien, alias Thomas Crowley, who in company with two other "yeggmen" "cracked" the safe of the Newark Valley postoffice on the night of Dec. 13, 1906, stealing $368 in postage stamps and about $8 in money.

Romer was taken to Binghamton and thence to Albany. He was admitted to bail in the sum of $10,000 until last February, when he pleaded guilty in the United States court and was sentenced to Auburn state prison for a term of one year and three months.

The five officers agreed, if any reward was forthcoming, to divide it equally. This will mean $40 each for Sheriff Parmalee, Undersheriffs Putnam, Chief of Police Robinson and Officers Allen and Horgan.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. Tonsiline Cures Sore Throat

The throat is one of the most delicate parts of the body. It is also one of the most important, and should be given the best possible care.

The throat is the gateway to the body. The air we breathe, the food we eat, the liquids we drink, all pass through it. It is very easily affected by cold, strain, exposure, etc., and Sore Throat is therefore one of our most common ailments. Strangely enough, it is also one of the most neglected.

Sore Throat is a very serious matter, for the whole system is in danger in consequence of it.

Every Sore Throat patient is a candidate for Tonsilitis, Quinsy, Diphtheria and other serious or fatal diseases, all of which can be prevented by the timely cure of the Sore Throat by the use of TONSILINE.

If taken in time a dose or two will do it. TONSILINE is made to cure throat diseases and nothing else. It is the one remedy for this purpose sold largely in the United States. Every user endorses it; every physician, knowing its virtues, commends it.

The one most important thing to remember about TONSILINE is the fact that it really does cure Sore Throat.

All druggists, 25c and 50c bottles.

FALLING OFF IN BEER USE.

Three Hundred Thousand Barrels Less Drank in City of Pittsburg Last Year Than During Previous Twelve Months.

Should the threatened war in the Balkans become a reality, 70 Montenegrins residing above Hazleton, will respond to their country's call.

Among the largest features of new business announced in Pittsburg on Saturday, was a $2,000,000 pipe line contract awarded the T. A. Gillispie company of that city, by the water commissioners and controllers of Greater New York.

The Lehigh Valley collieries Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5, Susquehanna Coal Co., William Penn and North American and McTurk's washeries, were again compelled to suspend operations on Saturday on account of the scarcity of water, throwing 9,000 men and boys out of employment.

After Mrs. John Kohler of Fleetwood, Berks county, had kindly given three strangers a meal, they became so threatening to her that she fled from the house across a field where her husband and her farm hands were working. They hastened to the house and captured the trio, who were sent to prison on Saturday.

Three masked men climbed fifteen feet early on Saturday morning to effect an entrance at a second atory window of the building ocupied by Frederick Demelow of Bethlehem, an octogenarian who kept a gun store. By the collapse of a large tank at the Barrett Manufacturing company's plant, Northside, Pittsburg, on Monday afternoon, 4,500 barrels of tar ran out into Rebecca street, covering it from South Avenue to Sproat alley, to the depth of a foot in many places.

Mary Wise of Bryansville, York county, aged 7 years, while at school on Monday got too close to a red hot stove and her clothing caught fire. She dashed for the door and ran screaming toward her home, but fell on the way and was burned so badly that she cannot recover.

William Jennings Bryan will be the guest of honor at a complimentary "dollar dinner" to be held in Uniontown the first week in January. Wade Hampton Richard, one of Fayette county's best known Democrats, arived home last Saturday and announced Bryan's acceptance.

The school board of Lock Haven has discovered that about a quarter of the boys attending the public schools use tobacco. It was decided to notify the parents of such boys who smoke cigarettes and also warn dealers who sell them, in an effort to break up the evil.

There are freaks even among fruit trees. A plum tree owned by Mrs. Mary Ann Loutit of Riverview, Renovo, is now in full bloom. The tree does not bloom in the Spring along with other trees. This is the third year this tree has bloomed at this unseemly time of the year.

Daniel Cooper, the umbrella manufacturer of Allentown, has secured a patent upon a collapsible umbrella, his own design. The umbrella which, when open, loks like an ordinary umbrella, folds up into a pac[illegible] that can easily be carried in a man's pocket. It is neat and strong, stronger in fact, than the ordinary umbrella.

The neighborly spirit still survives in the country districts of Pennsylvania. Six members of Clay Hill Ladies Aid society, in Franklin county, met at Henry Barr's on last Monday at 9 o'clock and husked corn until 2 o'clock in the afternoon. They husked 150 bushels. This was done because Mr. Barr was disabled recently in a serious accident.

Chloe Walker of Reading, who was a slave before the Civil war, celebrated her 106th birthday anniversary on Wednesday. She was honored with an elaborate birthday dinner, and on the table were 106 lighted candles. She is yet well preserved and says she would rather do without a piece of bread than without a smoke from her pipe.

A search was then instituted when he slipped the note into his mouth and swallowed it. But several persons saw this and at a trial on Tuesday the jury found him guilty in less than two minutes.

Fred Carneli and Maria Dunello, Italians, on Tuesday appeared before the clerk of courts of Washington county, to apply for a marriage licnese for three years. Questioning revealed that both were married but that the husband and wife still lived in Italy and were expected to come to this country in three years. When informed the license could not be granted they expressed disgust with this "free" country.

For shooting a rabbit near Emaus, Berks county, without license, Lion Batzigals, a foreigner, was on Thursday fined a total of $60.

Ministers of New Castle are taking action jointly for the abolishment of Sunday funerals, or at least limiting them to only such cases as seem absolutely necessary.

Lloyd Jones of Titusville, while out hunting on Thursday, was probably fatally injured by the explosion of his muzzle-loading shotgun, the breech pin being driven into his forehead.

During the past year the Chester branch of the Needlework Guild of America collected over 2,000 separate pieces of clothing which were distributed among the various benevolent societies and hospitals.

Fourteen years ago Anthony Maners, in a quarrel at Pittston, drew a revolver and fired three times at Alderman Thomas J. O'Brien. Each shot missed but Maners fled. On Thursday he returned, thinking the crime would be forgotten, but he was soon arrested and is now held to answer the charges against him.

Howard Hullinger of Reading, 32 years old, married, late on Wednesday night fired four times at Miss Margaret Jrotheroe, aged 36 years. Two of the shots took effect and her condition is critical. Hullinger admits that they had been friendly for three years, but he shot her because she gave his wife a reproachful name.

BUSINESS CHANGE.

Walter M. Shelton Purchases McCracken Pool Parlor and Cigar Store.

John R. McCracken, for the past two years owner and manager of the pool parlor and tobacco store in the Mercur block, has disposed of the business to Walter M. Shelton, who has been employed by Mr. McCracken during his ownership. The change became effective Monday, the new proprietor taking charge during the forenoon. The pool parlor and tobacco store has been one of the most popular places in town and will undoubtedly continue to be, as Mr. Shelton is well liked and competent to manage the business.

Mr. McCracken will devote his entire time to his stock brokerage business.

Stolen Suit Case.

A suit case bearing the initials "E. O. W." faintly printed on the top was stolen from the waiting room in the Lehigh Valley railroad station at Sayre, and all efforts of the railroad detective force thus far to locate it have been in vain. E. O. Warner, of Towanda, arrived in Sayre Thursday night and was on his way home. He left the suit case in the station for a few minutes, while he stepped out for a lunch, and when he returned it was missing. The theft was reported to the police at once and a description of the case and contents has been sent out. In the case was a pair of patent leather shoes, four or five white shirts, a blue coat and shaving outfit.—Athens News.

Progressive Euchre Party.

The George Clymer Chapter, D. A. R., at the home of G. E. Frost last evening entertained about 160 guests at a progressive euchre party. The parlors were prettily decorated, flags being used principally. A supper was served during the evening which was one of many enjoyments.

Another Diseased Cow.

WORK OF THE GRIM REAPER

Mrs. H T. June—In Memoriam.

(Communicated.)

Whenever a noble and courageous soul leaves the strife and clamor of this world to enter into the Great Silence we are accustomed to make for ourselves a lesson from the life thus withdrawn; we search into those hidden springs of motive, impulses that have made for victory; we seek therein a solution for our problems; we try to find the keynote of so sure and abiding faith that it has made life not only possible, not only endurable, but wholly blessed. And it seems to me, in the beautiful and beloved spirit who has recently been withdrawn from our sight, that two apparently antagonistic forces are combined to make what is perhaps the loveliest type of character; an absolute certitude of belief, held with a passionate and steadfast loyalty, together with the largest, most generous tolerance and sympathy.

People in all walks of life are mourning Mrs June today; the rich and the poor, the sick and those of intense vitality; the lowly and those who apparently need no friends; gay young girls and careless lads; those who ministered to her in the shops and in the common round of daily living; many all unknown to each other though known to her—all voiced her praise in real and personal grief when the hard news came.

"The weak and the gentle, the ribald and rude.
She took as she found them, and made them all good."

In many characters toleration and gentleness are coupled with a loosely held faith. "After all, the other people may be right," we say, "and it is not worth while to be extreme." With Mrs. June there was nothing of this laissez-aller acquiescence in the God of things as they are. Never for a moment was she false to the Truth that has been revealed. In the worship of the visible Church as it witnesses to the Eternal Invisible, she found adequate expression for her own intensity of conviction. Whenever her increasing bodily frality permitted her to follow her desires, she turned as the needle to the pole, to the services of the Church. Finding, as not every Churchman does find, the real nourishment that flows from the Blessed Sacrifice, no Eucharist found her absent unless she was literally prostrate and then she made her act of Spiritual Communion. From the Early Celebrations, from every Saints' Day, she drew the material for her daily spiritual existence and not only did she go to receive a blessing but to render worship. In all the corporal works of the Church she labored with joyful activity as long as strength permitted, and when at last, her busy hands hands gave up one by one, their willing tasks into those of others, all felt that her prayers were still a medium by which she wrought incessant good.

Carlyle said that the trouble in these days was that men had forgotten God. It was because Mrs. June so constantly remembered Him daily and hourly dwelling in the sure consciousness of His presence, that her little room became for many the very place of peace, made sanctuary by the same influence that breathed through that other "upper chamber" long ago. Who that has gone to her will forget the quiet room, the serene figure seated by the window with the bit of sewing? And as one met the gentle smile of welcome, one saw, if his eyes were keen, the little book of devotional reading, half hidden and yet within easy reach, and one felt the joy and blessedness that emanates from those whose lives are spent in constant touch with things invisible but not unreal.

"Oh, my dear, I do tremble for you!" she said to a friend who was about to undertake a great work. "You are so impetuous and vehement that I fear, with your strenuous insistence, you will alienate those whom you long to serve. I used to make that mistake so often, for in the old days I was very like you!" She impetuous and insistent! One found it hard to believe it, looking into that serene face and hearing that soft deliberate utterance.

In these days people go about proclaiming the newly-found panacea for universal ills. Restless, dissatisfied souls spend their days like the Athenians in eager devotion to every new thing. One would think the revelation of the Truth were hard to find. Yet after all it is very simple did we but have the simplicity to believe it. Is it not just here—in beautiful lives whose impelling power is earnest and purposeful living to the glory of God? It was just because of the reality and intensity of Mrs. June's convictions that she was enabled through Sacramental Grace to be an embodied peace.

"O my soul, spread wings of love to fly,
Wings of dove that soars on homebound wing:
Love trusts Love, till Love shall justify Everything."

Mrs. Clara Miller.

(Contributed.)

At 3:30 o'clock on October 28th there passed into the Great Beyond the soul of Mrs. Clara Miller. She leaves a husband, Edward Miller, a daughter, Susie Leona Miller, an aged father, Jeremiah Kilmer of Black, and her brothers, Henry and Fred Kilmer of Black, and Frank Kilmer of Towanda. All that medical skill and loving hands and money could do during the sickness to avert the sad end was done, and sympathizing friends have done all that could be done to soften the sad blow. The deceased was for many years a member of the M. E. church, and was a consistent christian woman, wife, mother, sister, neighbor, friend. She has gone to join the loved ones who have crossed the dark river just before, and we are by this occasion, helped to realize that we too must go to that radiant land that we trust lies just beyond the dark stream.

In the little Hornbrook churchyard
Lies the form we loved so well;
But her spirit, rising upward,
Tastes of joy no tongue can tell.
Free from pain and free from sickness,
Could we wish the loved one back
To partake of earth's mixed pleasures,
Where griefs rage and sorrows rack

Deer Season Opened

The fact that November 15 fell on Sunday this year added one days lease of life to the lot of some of the deer that roam the forests. The deer season should open on November 15, but as Sunday hunting is not permitted Monday, November 16, marks the opening of the season and the killing of deer may continue to December 1. Each hunter is limited to kill one male deer, with horns, in a season.

"NARROWS ROAD" AGAIN OPENED TO PUBLIC.

Fences Taken Down on Both Ends of Vacated Highway—Bridge Posted.

The dangerous "narrows road" along the foot of Table Rock mountain, which on Wednesday of this week was declared vacated by the Wysox township commissioners, is again open for travel, or was yesterday. Fences were built across the road, one near the East Towanda station and the other near the Eastern approach of the James street bridge, but yesterday they were taken down, and the road is again used by teams.

Today the new James street bridge will be posted with notices which read: "Notice—This bridge has not been accepted by Court or County, and is therefore not a public bridge. Persons traveling on bridge do so at their own risk. E. D. Harkness, L. H. Marsh and M. J. McNulty, County Commissioners."

Until the approaches to the new bridge are put in satisfactory condition and the structure is accepted by court and county, the "narrows road" will probably remain in use.

COLONEL PRATT ON WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Congressman-Elect Says Protect Him From Woman Who Wants to Vote.

Col. C. C. Pratt of New Milford, who was just elected to congress, is a very original and interesting personage. Whenever he talks he always says something that will probably arouse your combative instincts and that gives you a new line of thought. He evidently has some unexpurgated ideas on women's rights, for the other day he strayed into a convention of suffragists in Philadelphia and made the following remarks:

"I have no objections to woman's voting from the man's standpoint, but I have a most decided objection from the woman's standpoint. In my estimation, business has within the past 24 years taken away about 50 per cent. of all the qualities that go to make woman lovable, and I would most earnestly plead that the other 50 per cent might not be destroyed by politics. Let woman vote if she wants to but protect me from the woman who wants to.—Susquehanna Transcript.

Dave Did It.

On Saturday, a woman passenger on the Westbound Black Diamond picked up a diamond which had been lost by another lady passenger and placed it in her stocking. The conductor and train crew were appealed to but the woman refused to give up the precious stone, telling them it was in her stocking and defying them to get it. When the train reached Sayre, Dave Kendig, Lehigh station agent and special police officer was called supon. He scoured up his badge, put on an extra pair of spectacles and dug in. He never blushed, never turned his head but stood like a true soldier and waited for the lady to divest herself of the diamond, which she did, parting with it with a long sigh. Mr. Kendig will henceforth pose as an S. S.—Stocking Specialist.

Plucky Young Lady.

At Litchfield on Wednesday of last week the roof of C. E. Drake's house caught fire and there was a gale blowing. There were no men at home and none within call, so Miss Alice Drake carried a long ladder to the house and managed to hoist it to the roof, which was very high and steep, carried pails of water up the ladder and managed to put out the flames unaided.

FIVE BEARS ON A SPREE.

Real, Live Nature Story From the Wilds of Sullivan County.

The following article was sent from Laporte to the Philadelphia Record. Coming from the county seat no comments are necessary:

"Searching their souls for sounds to tell how glad they felt," five big black bears, very, very drunk, gave a vaudeville performance in the Loyalsock woods, near Ringdale, late on Thursday evening, and Farmer Donald Gallagher, who watched the performance, says he is really glad he didn't have a gun.

"John Ferrell, another farmer has a big cider press at a point on the edge of the forest, and close to the Ringdale road. Hundreds of bushels of apples have been ground and pressed during the past few months and the pomace has been dumped in a great heap near the Lolaysock creek. It recently rained on this pomace and it fermented.

"Farmer Gallagher was driving home from Ringdale when, near the cider press, he heard the sounds of revelry. His horses refused to proceed and he went forward to investigate. Dancing around the pomace pile were five bears, all whooping and carousing in Bacchanalian abandon. The farmer avers that while he watched they had a football game, a Plute war dance, a grand opera rehearsal and a grand Salome wind-up. Then the farmer yelled applause and the bears tried to tear down the forest making their get- away."

When You Think

Of the pain which many women experience with every month it makes the gentleness and kindness always associated with womanhood seem to be almost a miracle. TOWANDA, PA., NOVEMBER 19, 1908

DOMESTIC SCIENCE.

The Altoona Tribune is of the opinion that the polite name of the practical teaching which should be given to the girls is domestic science The old-fashioned name is household work. Every girl should know how to bake, to cook, to sweep, to make beds, to make herself generally useful about the house. Perhaps it will not be necessary in every case to practice the actual work, but it will be a decided advantage to know how to instruct others, and in many cases happiness or misery for a household will depend upon the actual knowledge of the wife and mother

Especially is such practical teaching needful in a community largely composed of workingmen. The most terrible calamity that can befall a working man is to marry a wife who is ignorant of the details of housekeeping and who has no inclination to learn. Many a good man endures a wretched existence because his wife is not a helpmate, and some, unable to stand the pressure, go straight to destruction.

We agree with the esteemed editor of The Tribune. The sooner that mothers learn teach their daughters how to do housework in preference to thumping a piano or trying to warble, the sooner will it be better and more safe for the average man to marry, and there will be no need to worry about the so-called "servant girl problem."

HATS IN CHURCH.

The pastor of a Brooklyn church recently suggested that the feminine members of his flock should remove their hats during service. We use the word "suggested" advisedly, says The Baltimore Sun, although certain of the members of his congregation understood that their pastor had decreed this reform and left nothing to the discretion of the fair sex.

But whether it was a suggestnon of a decree seems to be a matter of no importance to the women of this congregation. They have declined to unhat themselves, and the pastor is in a very embarrassing position. There are certain reforms which may seem to be highly desirable, but if they are unattainable it is, possibly, the wisest course not to insist upon them. We do not suggest that any member of the fair sex goes to church to display her hat or gown or to study devout attendants. Therefore we presume the refusal of the Brooklyn women to accede to their pastor's wishes must be based upon considerations in no way related to the pomp and vanity of a wicked world.

It is to be hoped that they will give the explanation of the motives which impelled them to issue their declaration of independence. We cannot doubt that it is the outcome of noble and altrustic principles.

The more we do to promote the interests of the community the better will we serve our own welfare. When the towns prosper their inhabitants also prosper.

There should be a consolidation of effort among the various organizations that have their primary purpose the amelioration of the condition of the poor. Otherwise there may be much wasted effort.

One of the good traits of the American voters is their confidence in human nature. They believe that the people do rule. And when the fight is over they stop chewing" and go back to work. It is a wise and saving grace, and it makes the average American hard game for the demagogue or professional agitator.

The treasurers of the six political parties which conducted the campaign in Pennsylvania will file expense accounts at the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth in 30 days. The candidates for State offices will do the same, but congressional, senatorial and representative with their counties.

The second morning of the term at Amherst college President Harris announced at the chapel service that there would be no more hazing at Amherst. Class contests are not forbidden, but he said individuals were not to be subjected to indignities. What may appear strange is that the students responded at once to the appeal, and hazing at Amherst has ceased. If students every where would say ditto the college world would have peace and the conduct of gentlemen. Hazing is a brutal and cowardly kind of fun. A score of hoodlums jumping on one man and subjecting him to all kinds of indignities, even in cases to the extent of killing him, is fit for a barbaric age, but not for this blsessed twentieth century.

EXTENSION OF PERSONAL REGISTRATION.

Judge Vosburg of Lackawanna county is of the opinion that the personal registration act should be extended and made applicable to the boroughs of the state, and there are not a few who agree with him. At present the act applies only to cities.

It appears that the provisions of the act cannot be extended to boroughs without also including all the election districts of the state, unless the state constitution be amended. Under the constitution the state legislature can and has enacted a persoanl registration system for cities, but if it goes beyond that the law would necessarily apply to the entire state, which is not, in the opinion of those who have given the matter most attention advisable. If there shall be interest enough in the matter to prompt a move for a change in the constitution, the modification of the registration law so that it would be applicable to boroughs could be brought about. If this is not done—and there does not seem to be an immediate prospect of it—personal registration in boroughs is not close at hand, for a change in the state constitution is a matter which requires much time.

There are numerous boroughs whose population exceed that of the smaller cities, and where conditions favor the corruption of the ballot more than in such cities, and the claim that if personal registration is needed in the smaller cities it is just as much needed in the larger boroughs is entirely reasonable. At every election it has been shown that there are many boroughs in which the personal registration act should be applied, and where it is necessary if fraud is to be prevented.

As for the idea that the law should be amended so that it would apply to all election districts in the state—country as well as boroughs and cities, there is said to be considerable sentiment in its favor. Its opponents say, however, and The Reporter-Journal believes they are right, that a personal registration law for country districts would not be feasible; mainly for this reason—that in the country the voters in many cases have so far to go that they would not be put to the trouble of traveling the distance both on registration day and again on election day. Such a law in the country would serve the purpose of defeating a full expression of the popular will, and so be a bad thing. It is hard enough now, oftentimes, to arouse the peple and get out a large vote, and if "general apathy" is a terror to campaign managers now, what would be the condition of affairs if the country voter had to go twice to the polling place, instead of once? There is enough in this to make it doubtful whether the legislature could ever be brought to pass a personal registration law covering all districts.

REPRESENTATIVE GOVERNMENT.

A fundamental principle, perfectly clear but often overlooked, is expressed in the opinion of the Supreme court of North Dakota, that members of the legislature cannot be compelled to vote for the candidate for the United States Senate named at a primary election. The election of a senator is a duty committed to the legislature by the constitution of the United States, and by the constitution of the state. No mere act of assembly can substitute another method of election, or coerce the members of the legislature in the performance of their constitutional function.

This is just as true in every state as in North Dakota, wisely remarks the Philadelphia Ledger. It is also just as important to be remembered in these days of short-cut "reforms." It is the right of all the people to alter their form of government if they will, but as long as we elect to live under a constitutional form our security lies in conforming to its requirements. We elect representatives to whom are committed certain specified duties. If we cannot trust their discretion, we shoud elect others whom we can trust. We cannot bind them by extra constitutional instructions.

Any member of a legislature will naturally pay heed to the expressed preferences of his own constituents or of a majority of the people of a state. As far as this imposes an obligation, it is moral, not legal. It rests with his individual conscience and judgment under his official oath, to determine how far any pre-election "pledges" shall bind his action. They cannot be enforced on him by any process of law. Under a representative government, there is no newfangled device by which the people can relieve themselves of the necessity of making choice of fit persons to represent them.

The New York World in an extended editorial on the late election, proves by figures that the Democratic candidate for President has lost in popularity each time he has run for office. In 1896 Mr. Bryan was defeated by a popular plurality of 601,854. In 1900 he was defeated by a poular plurality of 849,790. This year the popular plurality against him runs upwards of 1,100,000.

One of the things that the legislature should not neglect in the next session is the passage of laws sufficient for the safeguarding of the forests that they may be protected from fires, and that men who ruthlessly and intentionally set fire to such forests may be punished. It appears to be an accepted fact that these fires are the result of carelessness, or spite, or ignited by men who hope to make money by fighting them. All of these causes are sufficient to invite attention and call for severe punishment. It is a subject that the state should handle with a strong arm.

THE PRESIDENTIAL VOTE.

In the year 1900 McKinley polled 4414 more votes in Bradford county than did Mr. Bryan, and in 1904 Roosevelt polled 5445 more than Parker. The latter majority was phenomenal, and was a part of the Roosevelt landslide, and not a proper standard by which to judge the votes of other years. The majority for McKinley over Bryan in 1900—4414—is not far from the usual majority given the Republican Presidential candidate in Bradford county. Taft has a lead over Bryan in the county this year of 4239. So it can be seen that Bradford county has not been swept from her Republican moorings, and that the Republican party and its principles are as dear to the hearts of the people as ever.

This fact is gratifying to all loyal Republicans. Once in a great while, on some portion of the local ticket, or on congress perhaps, owing to factional disturbances and divisions, or mayhap, a Democratic candidate who has wealth, the solid strength of the Republican phalanx can be sufficiently undermined to give a scant victory to the enemy, but this overturn does not come often. As to congress it has happened but three times in the history of the Fourteenth district. And whenever it has occurred the strong Republican inclination of the district has reasserted itself as soon as the offending cause has been removed. This year, Pratt, Republican candidate for congress, owing to causes which are so well known that they need not be named here, carried the county of Bradford by the reduced majority of 583. But if proof that Bradford county is as strongly Republican as ever is needed and is not undergoing a change of heart politically, it may be found in the majority which Republican Taft has over Democrat Bryan—4239.

All true Republicans deplore the party divisions and defections which in the last two years have weakened the party in its choice of a Representative in Congress, but thanks to their well grounded faith in Republican principles they can point to unmistakable proofs that Bradford county and the old Wilmot-Grow Congressional District have not turned cold to their old love. While the enemy kept us stepping lively on the congressional matter we beat them, and when it came to a fair and general measure of party strength—the choice of a President—we "beat them to a frazzle."

READ THE LABELS.

Every one knows how careless the average man is with regard to signing petitions, says the Pittsburg Gazette-Times. He will usually affix his name to any paper that is presented to him rather than affront the person presenting it. He assumes that it must be all right or he would not be asked to assist; and argues that one signature more or less can have no appreciable effect on the result of the petition, which is likely to be decided upon its intrinsic merits anyway Hence it is quite easy to believe that petitions would be numerously signed though they asked to have the petitioners sent to jail for six months.

H. C. Steifel of Pittsburg, in the current bulletin of the Dairy and Food division of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, raises the question whether the average housewife is not just as careless in reading the labels of the foods she buys. What is the use of the foods and drugs act if the people for whose benefit it was enacted do not take the trouble to make it operative? Women buy a bottle of pickles, for instance. "They see the pickles and that is enough," says Mr. Steifel.

"They never bother their heads about the label. It can state that the pickles are absolutely pure and are put up by a well known firm, or it can inform the reader that the pickles are made of putty, hand painted with chrome green, soured with oil of vitriol and preserved with embalming fluid."

The Institute is closed and the teachers have returned to their homes. Towanda was honored and graced by their presence, and it is but fair to presume they enjoyed and profited by their stay in the City of Promise.

Some few of the school districts which did not receive their allotment of the state funds because of their failure to file the reports required by law or to enforce the compulsory education law, are now after their money. They have been informed of what the state requires and some of them have sent in belated reports. Wherever the law has been complied with State Treasurer Sheatz has paid the money.

What do you say to buying your Christmas presents now? Think ahead six weeks and in your mind's eye see the hurry and scurry and hurly-burly that will dominate your home and favorite shops as it did just before Christmas last year and ever has and ever will unless you wish to avoid it. Can't you see the tired, over-wrought woman's scramble at the bargain counters that is as inevitable before Christmas each year as is the 25th of December itself?

"The Penn State Farmer," the monthly periodical of the Agricultural society of the Pennsylvanit State College, has been issued for November, and contains an especially interesting round-up of subjects, some of these enhanced by illustrations. The number contains an article on "Practical Gardening for Public Schools" that is of unusual merit and interest. There are now 225 students enrolled in State's school of agriculture, an increase of 50 per cent. over last year, this fact alone showing the fast growing importance that is conceded to the studies embraced in its curriculum. And that the "Penn State Farmer" has had much to do in enlisting this wider interest there is no doubt. May it grow in influence and popularity.

HOW THE PRESIDENT IS ELECTED.

Curiously enough there are still many persons, apparently, who do not understand the system of electing a President of the United States. Practically we have already chosen Taft. Technically, the election does not take place until the second week of January, for it is the electors whom the people have chosen who will do the electing. If he lives, William H. Taft is about as certain of the honor as anything mundane may be. But if he should die, or the electors should care to use their constitutional right to elect whom they please, some other man will be chosen. There is no legal reason why the electors should not choose Mr. Bryan or William R. Hearst or any other American born citizen who is 35 years old.

The electors will meet at each state capital and prepare three similar ballots, one of which will be sent by mail to Washington, one carried by messenger to the Vice President and one filed in the office of the Federal court nearest the capital of the state. On each ballot will be recorded the votes cast by these electors for President and Vice President. In the case of Maryland it appears that two votes will be cast for Taft and Sherman and six for Bryan and Kern. These votes of the electors decide the Presidential election. They will be canvassed by congress under the Hoar act, and there will be no going behind the returns in any event. That was settled by the law passed after the Hayes-Tilden controversy.

Suppose that after the electors in all the states have voted and gone home one of the successful candidates should die, who would take his place? The statutes do not provide for this contingency and there is a diversity of opinion as to what should be done. Possibly the electors would be convened again by special act of congress, which would then be in session. It will be remembered that in 1872 Horace Greeley died before the electors met, yet many insisted on voting for him. It is evident that the law should be amended to provide for all contingencies.

Originally the Confederation Congress fixed the first Wednesday in January for the choice of electors by the state legislatures, the first Wednesday in February for them to meet and cast the vote and the first Wednesday in March for the inauguration. Washington was not inaugurated until April 30, but March 4 (which fell on a Wednesday in 1789) still remains inauguration day unless the date happens to fall on Sunday. Considering the state of the weather in Washington, it is a pity that April 30 was not continued as inauguration day.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

MR. DEAN'S VICTORY.

The sheriff elect, John H. Dean, has cause to congratulate himself on the result of the ballot on November 3. His opponent, M. J. McNulty, is a man widely known throughout the county by reason of two terms of excellent service as county commissioner. He conducted an energetic canvass and put up a hard fight. He was a formidable opponent, and Mr. Dean's majority—2727—while something less than that of the head of the ticket, is a satisfactory one. The people had confidence in Mr. Dean, and showed themselves willing to put him at the head of the office in which he has shown himself courteous and competent. The voters have made no mistake. The Reporter-Journal has no doubt that Mr. Dean will prove himself a most excellent official and a fathful servant of the people. No candidate on the ticket is better qualified for the place he sought than is Mr. Dean for the sheriffalty.

The Time Has Come for Postal Banks.

Mr. Taft construes the result of the election of Nov. 3 as a mandate from the people in favor of postal savings banks. He is right. There was no more clear-cut issue in the Presidential campaign than this one. The Republican National convention and its nominee for President declared unequivocally for postal savings bank legislation. Mr. Bryan and the convention which nominated him pinned their faith to the policy of guaranty of bank deposits as preferable to government savings banks. The people declared their preference for the latter. They have a right to expect, therefore, that in the near future the postal savings system, the establishment of which already has been delayed too long, will be put into operation.—Chicago Daily News.

The Bradford Star tried last week to make its readers believe that Taft had a "close call." It was not so close but that Taft had a plurality over Bryan in the popular vote of something like 1,100,000. The Star's argument, which it copied from and credited to the Elmira Star-Gazette, is that in seven states which gave Taft pluralities aggregating 109,131, a change of one-half that number of votes—less than 55,000—would have thrown the states to Bryan and he would have been elected in the electoral college. This is an ingenious arrangement of figures, and it is also the same old pipe dream that is passed around among the mourners after every Presidential election. A more practical way of stating the matter is this—if Bryan had carried a lot of states that he didn't carry and which Taft did, he would have been elected. One of the states that the Star-Gazette "if-ed" was Ohio, which gave Taft 50,000 or over. And another was Kansas, which went for Taft something like 25,000.

A person who concocts such doses of comfort as this for the disappointed has the same sweet brand of hope and cheerfulness that was possessed by the man in the old rabbit-hunt story. A friend came along and asked the hunter how many rabbits he had caught. "Well," he replied, "when I catch the one I am after and two more, I'll have three."

MEDICAL INSPECTION OF THE SCHOOLS.

It needs no argument to convince most people that the public schools, where so many children of all classes congregate for a number of hours each day, require careful and continuous attention as regards sanitary conditions, but not so many people appreciate the importance of systematic medical examinations of the pupils individually. A movement has been set on foot by the Luzerne County Society for the Prevention and Treatment of Tuberculosis, looking toward the establishment of a medical inspector in every school district in Luzerne county.

In many cities throughout the country, in recent years, medical examiners have been appointed for the schools, and they are doing a most important work in detecting and correcting physical defects in pupils. They give special attention to diseases of the eye, ear and throat, and other defects that prevent the child from making normal progress in school work. Examinations are made periodically, and a careful record is kept of the condition of each child. The teachers are encouraged to familiarize themselves with the physical condition of each pupil, as revealed in their medical examiner's report, and it frequently happens that the teacher can do much toward correcting the difficulty. Where the defect is more marked, the medical examiner takes up the matter with the parents, and if the parents are unable to provide he proper medical service, it is furnished at the public expense. It has been proven, by reliable statistics, that such periodical and thorough examinations of the school children individually by public inspectors have resulted not only in protecting the schools from the ravaages of contagious diseases, but they have also resulted in the marked mental development of children who had formerly been deficient. Their backwardness was not due to lack of mental capacity, but principally to defects of hearing, sight and throat.

The Luzerne Tuberculosis society is engaged in an effort to introduce such medical inspections in the schools of the county. It is handicapped, of course, by the fact that there is as yet no provision in the school laws for the employment of medical inspectors, but a good beginning can be made, says its advocates, through the co-operation of the boards of health, and the near future will probably witness them full power to establish and regulate medical inspections in the schools.

PLAYGROUNDS.

The year has been one of rapid and substantial growth in the establishment and maintenance of playgrounds. Where 66 cities had them a year ago, 185 have them now. They have involved an expenditure for purchase, equipment and maintenance of a million dollars a month. They range from the great parks and elaborate field houses of Chicago, to such modest beginnings as that made in Kalabazoo, Mich., where a fund of $200 for salaries, supplemented by gifts of lumber and metal and rope which the boys of the manual training classes turned into apparatus, gave a successful six weeks of supervised play in a school yard and set an exemple which it is hoped will inspire the board of education to establish a number of play grounds next year.

Another eveidence of growth lies in the establishment of two new companies to manufacture play ground apparatus, and increases from 100 per cent to 200 per cent in the sales of existing companies. Newspaper clippings on the subject, furnished by an agency, have increased from 83 to over 100 a month. Besides all this, there has been a widespread intensive growth in lengthening the hours during which playgrounds are open, and in several cities, provision for night play by electric light for men and older boys.

MR. GORDON'S HEAVY VOTE.

Prothonotary Gordon's vote at the recent polling of the electorate was 7375, which is the largest received by any candidate on the local ticket save one—Dr. T. Ben Johnson, who enjoyed the distinction of having been named on both the Republican and the Democratic tickets. Mr. Gordon's opponent on the Democratic ticket—the late Charles M. Hall—died several days before election, and undoubtedly his vote total was somewhat augmented by the ballots of Democrats who wanted to vote for someone and having no candidate of their own, voted for him. His majority, according to the official count, is exactly 4600.

Mr. Gordon has now served the county of Bradford as prothonotary and clerk of the court for one term—three years, and it is the universal judgment that the interests of the people were never more carefully looked after, as to the administering of this office, than by him. He is accurate, prompt and painstaking in the discharge of his duty, and is, moreover, courteous and obliging to all who have business with him; and courtesy is no small part of the equipment that should be required of those who are commissioned to fill our public offices. The Reporter-Journal believes the people of Bradford county are to be congratulated on their prothonotary and prothonotary-elect. The affairs of the "prot's. office" will be well taken care of.

We feel very much encouraged in our efforts to induce people to attend church on Sunday. Last Sabbath one man attended the evening services in one of the churches, who has not been inside a house of worship in 20 years. He enjoyed it, benefited by the experience. Another well known Towandian who has not much faith in present day preaching will try it tomorrow. You will see him in a front pew, but be sure you are there to see him.

THE NEW CONGRESS.

The Republican majority in the House of Representatives for the Sixty-first Congress will be 47 as against 57 at present. With a good working majority in the House and a Senate whose Republican members will outnumber the Democratic two to one that harmony between the legislative and the executive branches which is indispensable to active and constructive political life is guaranteed. At the same time the strength of the controlling party in Congress is such as to quicken the initiative and make robust the peculiar capacities of that great department of the government.

There have been times when a party having but a small majority in the two Houses has done great and efficient work. Indeed, in some cases, with one branch Republican and the other Democratic, something more than routine legislation has been enacted. The Bland-Allison bill was not only passed by a Democratic House and a Republican Senate, but was passed by heavy majorities over the veto of a Republican President. But these are the exceptions to the rule, and when either house is nearly balanced politically it often loses much of its strength.

Congress in the last 20 years has grown stronger, not at the expense of he executive and the legislative, but by the steady increase of federal functions brought about by the growth of the country and the accruing demands of our complex social and political structure. And this strength, we may believe, will impress itself during the next administration—not by contrariety but by the wholesome co-operation of positive counsels. The House will lose nothing of that power which, when in the hands of a forceful speaker, and then only, enables it, when necessary, to make headway against the Senate. And into the Senate will be ejected a new element of liberalism which will tend to enhance its Democratic efficiency. Great is the work which the new Congress will have to do, and most responsible. No more important duty could confront a Congress than that with which this one will be charged at the very outset—the revision of the tariff. And that this work and all that is to follow will be well done, we may legitimately hope. The efficiency and the sense of a great public obligation that are born of conscious and unchallenged strength, should insure it.

THE STATE CAPITOL.

It is probable that one of the first things to be considered in framing the general appropriation bill in the next legislature will be the cost of completing the art decorations of the State capitol. The North corridor is bare of paintings, although provisions had been made for them. It was intended to place in the spandrils paintings representing the industries of the state balancing the paintings of the races which settled Pennsylvania in the South corridor, executed by Van Ingen. When work was ordered stopped on all capitol contracts not begun these paintings were included. Since that time Artist Alexander, who had the contract, has signified his willingness to go ahead.

The capitol is being put into shape for the convening of the legislature on January 4. The legislative chambers have been overhauled and a ventilating system to regulate the air currents installed, while all of the forty committee rooms have been cleaned out. A number of improvements to ventilation have been found necessary.

The signs are that the members of the general assembly of our good old Commonwealth will be comfortably and artistically housed while rendering her home service this Winter.

It is said Governor Stuart is going to make the advocacy of good roads a prominent feature of his message to the legislature.

Advertising pays, and it paid the Prohibition candidate for state senator in the Twenty-fifth Senatorial district, although he was defeated. Tioga county is in the district. The candidate's name is Elisha Kent Kane, and he conducted his campaign by advertising in the newspapers. The Wellsboro Agitator says: "The Prohibition vote in this senatorial district in 1904 was 122. Elisha Kent Kane raised it to 5,574, and he did it practically by advertising in the newspapers at a fraction of the cost of any kind of campaign he might have waged."

ELECTRCITY AND THE CROPS.

From recent cablegrams it seems that the dreams of the late Prof. Coles, who claimed that electricity would revolutionize farming in time, are about to be realized, says the Scranton Tribune. In England they are experimenting with electricity, and so far the tests have been successful. A number of wires are stretched across a field supported by posts, and charged with a good pressure. It is said that the leakage of electricity immediately begins, and when one walks under the wires its effect can be felt upon the hair. Under the stimulating action plant life grows much more rapidly than when fed only by ordinary sunlight and ozone.

The current is maintained for several hours each day, but is shut off at night. Those in charge of the experiments say that gooseberries yield 17 per cent increase and that strawberries gain 36 per cent under the subtle influence of the electric current. They also claim that wheat yields better when under the wires, and furnishes a better quality of flour.

While many may be inclined to doubt the efficacy of electricity as a plant developer unless they can see the experiments with their own eyes, the scheme does not look improbable. In fact, when you come to think of it, nothing seems improbable in view of what electricity has done for us during the past quarter of a century. Now that they are lighting things, heating us, and cooking by electricity, why should not the food products also be stimulated by a few volts, when the occasion demands it?

John A. Kipp, Republican candidate for district attorney of Pike county, in the recent campaign, is a brother of Congressman George W. Kipp of Towanda. He was defeated by his Democratic opponent, George R. Bull, by a majority of 31.

LARGE TREES.

Objects of Nature in the Village of Wyalusing, Says Rocket.

Says the Wyalusing Rocket: "Among the many objects in nature—of more than passing notice—with which Wyalusing is surrounded, may be mentioned several very large trees. One of these—an elm—stands near Welles' flouring mills, being a few rods to the Southwest. This tree at one foot above the ground, measures 27 feet in circumference, thus making it about nine feet in diameter. It is proportionately tall, its huge limbs reaching not only high up, but spreading out in broad expanse, and looking like a real giant—a thing it really is.

"The other tree is an oak, and stands on the bottom lands West of the Fisher Welles homestead. This is an immense tree of its species, measuring as it does, 21 feet at a point a foot above the ground. It is also immense in the spread of its limbs, which reach out over 50 feet in all directions from the trunk, making a sweep of at least 110 feet from the outer limbs on one side, to the extremity of those directly opposite.

"They are assuredly two giants, but to be seen at their best, or to be at all appreciated, it must be when in full foliage, as then they are not only colossal, but are objects of both admiration and beauty."

About Buckwheat.

In a recent issue of The Review, I noticed an article entitled "Scratching," over in Altoona, from eating buckwheat cakes and I considered it rather detrimental to the modern miller. They must have been eating some of the real old-fashioned kind such as is required for the Baltimore market called "Nigger flour." Under modern milling the itching qualities are removed the first thing. Thus, first thoroughly cleaned, then passed through a coarse pair of rolls and the shucks sifted off, leaving nothing but the white inside to grind. While in ye olden times, the shucks went through between two four-foot stones running close enough together to grind flour scouring those shucks from a black to a red color and the black going into the flour. There should be no more itch in the meat of buckwheat kernel than any other grain. The bran from wheat has a different effect on people than the inner side of the berry. Modern milling removes the bran, the first process, also the buckwheat shuck or bran.

Tell them to come over in Bradford county, the pioneer in the buckwheat trade, and get some of the Simon Pure. Then if they scratch we will furnish the poles to rub against free.

Yours,
ULSTER MILLER.

Passing of Master Mechanic.

Says the Sayre Times-Record: "By the 15th of this month the office of the Lehigh master mechanic in Sayre will be no more. After years of existence, for there was a Lehigh master mechanic in Sayre almost as soon as Sayre changed from a pasture field into a town, there will not be a thing left to tell that once there was such an officer as a master mechanic or that he had a large force of clerks. A few weeks ago D. D. Robertson, master mechanic at Sayre, was transferred to Wilkes-Barre and the division shops at Sayre were placed under Willard Kells, master mechanic at Buffalo."

Near Elopement.

Romantic Sayre, the burg that only throbs with life on Lehigh payadys, was the scene of a near elopement Saturday night. An Italian wanted to hie away with a young maiden, but her mother, whom it is alleged also loved the Italian made him back up on an abduction charge. For one man to have two wives is not uncommon in Sayre, but when mother and daughter both want to make the same male happy, it is going at a pace which will cause even Andrew Jackson Lehigh Cotton some worry to keep tab on them.

Hit By His Own Machine.

City Treasurer Dan Hart of Wilkes-Barre, owns an automobile, but is afraid to ride in it after dark. The other night he sent his automobile to the garage and hired a cab in which to ride home. At the corner of Park avenue, as the cab swung into Hazle street, an automobile bounded along and there was a collision which shattered a cab window and threw Hart into a temporary panic. Getting out and muttering threats of a big damage suit Dan was astonished to find that he had been struck by his own automobile.

To Enter New York.

A New York paper is authority for the statement that the Black Diamond express will soon be using the Pennsylvania tunnel under the Hudson river, and thus instead of stopping at Jeasey City, will run directly into the heart of New York. It is also stated that entirely new equipment is to be purchased for the flyer.

Visiting Southern Battlefields.

Their destination is Fredericksburg, where they will witness the dedication of the monument to General Humphrey's division. They will visit Washington and Harirsburg befcre returning.—Canton Sentinel.

Ambitious young men and ladies should learn telegraphy; for, since the new eight-hour law became effective there is a shortage of many thousand telegraphers. Positions pay from $50 to $70 per month to beginners. The National Telegraphers Institute of Philadelphia, Pa., and five other cities is operated under supervision of railroad officials and all students are placed when qualified. Write them for particulars.

MANSFIELD NORMAL TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.

Former Students and Graduates of School Perfect Organization.

At the close of the lecture at the opera house Tuesday night, graduates and former students of the Mansfield State Normal school now engaged in teaching in Bradford county, and who are attending the institute this week, met in the grand jury room and formed an organization which is to be known as the Mansfield Normal Teachers' association. Seventy-five teachers were present and joined the association.

Brief addresses were made by Judge Fanning, one of the members, and others, followed by the perfection of the organization and the election of the following officers:

President—Prof. L. J. Russell of Towanda.

Vice-president—Prof Clark of Ulster.

Secretary—Miss Gray of Ulster.

Treasurer—Miss Crandall.

At the close of the meeting Prof. O. C. Gortner, a member of the Mansfield Normal faculty, invited the members of the newly formed association to the Sugar Bowl for refreshments. The evening was one of rare enjoyment for the members of the association.

Challenge Accepted.

Some time ago, Dell Higgins, John Francis Mannix, William Hoag, and Emery Dunn, four Sayre pool experts, had the audacity to challenge any four players in Towanda for a tournament to decide the championship of the county. There are so many experts in Towanda, and all are so classy, that it has been quite a task to select four which would give the Sayre players a chance, but now this has been done, and John R. McCracken, proprietor of the pool and billiard parlor in the Mercur block, has authorized The Review to say that the challenge of the Sayre gentlemen is accepted, and arrangements for the game will be made at once.

Million-Dollar Court House.

The new million-dollar court house at Wilkes-Barre will soon be furnished with an appropriate court yard. Great progress is being made in cleaning up and grading the court house grounds. All the concrete sidewalks in the yard have been completed, and there is but very little grading left to be done. The terraced bank, sloping down to the retaining wall on three sides of the building, has been sodded carefully, and the one lone derrick which stands in the yard is now engaged in picking up the few remaining pieces of stone about the yard and loading them in a wagon preparatory to their removal.

Adjournment Taken.

The case of the Commonwealth vs. Ella Bouse of Macedonia, charged with taking some chickens which did not belong to her, was heard before 'Squire Orcutt Monday. The defense is that the chickens were taken from John Coolbaugh of Macedonia, by mistake. After submitting the evidence, adjournment was taken until Nov. 30, when the arguments of the attorneys will be heard. David E. Kaufman represents the Commonwealth, while Lilley & Wilson are attorneys for the defendant.

Newspaper in Bother.

Hon. B. L. Winters, publisher of the Waverly Free Press-Record, has been notified to appear in Washington on Dec. 4, 1908, at which time he will be given a hearing by the Postoffice department to show cause why the Free Press-Record shall not be denied the second-class mail privileges. The charge is that the list of persons to whom the paper is sent, is not a legitimate list of subscribers, according to postal laws.

New Bank Sure Go.

The comptroller of the currency at Washington, D. C., has approved the application for a charter for a new bank in Canton, and as the capital has been fully subscribed it will not be long before the progressive little village will have two banks. Lively Runaway.

The delivery team of the Dayton Milling company took a little run without a driver Monday afternoon, galloping up Main street, and to the barn where the horses stopped. No damage was done, and the horses were none the worse for the burst of speed.

FEARS GAME EXTERMINATION.

Does Secretary Kalbfus Who Suggests Restocking of State.

In his annual report to the State Game Commission, Secretary J. C. Kalbfus recommends a state appropriation for restocking of the state with game.

He declares that hunting makes real men and that the Americans repelled the British in two wars because they were largely a nation of hunters and that sport in the woods today is a valuable training, which is being interfered with because of the growing scarcity of game.

Dr. Kalbfus recommends that an appropriation of $25,000 be made by the next legislature, in addition to the regular appropriation to the commission, for the purpose of buying game to restock.

He also recommends that the game season be shortened in order to conserve the game that remains. He says that the necessity for this action is apparent, and that he has the advice of hunters and sportsmen that the open season should not begin until after Nov. 1. Now part of the season opens in October, which is generally a dry month, and, that animals seeking water fall easy prey to hunters.

"Let There Be Light."

A petition is being circulated for the purpose of installing street lights in New Albany. Amen, that's the talk. Years ago the earth was created and the Master Builder said: "Let there be light." There has been light ever since, but not in New Albany. What is a village but a big family of people? What would you think of a family so penurious that they never lighted a lamp but sat in the dark to save a few cents? What's the difference? We have blundered around in the dark long enough. Let us have lights and let's have them permanently hereafter.—New Albany Mirror. Would alcohol lamps do, Brother Taylor? If so, we will loan you one.

Fine New Station.

Under the auspices of the Scranton board of trade the magnificent new Lackawanna railway station, in that city, was formally opened on Wednesday afternoon. The structure has been erected at a cost of a half million dollars. It has been two years in building and is 240 feet in length by 88 feet wide. The waiting room proper is a thing of beauty and a joy forever. It is 40 by 105 feet and two and a half stories high.

Value of a Board of Trade.

The Williamsport board of trade was eight years old Tuesday. On Nov. 10, 1900, offices were opened at the city hall with General Manager H. R. Laird in charge, and since that time an immense amount of work has been accomplished. Many new industries have been secured for Williamsport, giving employment to hundreds of workmen, and the Ideal City has been advertised from one end of the country to the other.

New Trial Refused.

The application for a new trial in the case of W. P. Weiss vs. the Lehigh Valley Railroad company was argued on Monday, but was refused by Judge Terry. The only ground upon which a new trial was asked was that the verdict of $11,800 rendered by the jury was excessive, but the judge was not convinced. The company has three weeks in which to settle or take an appeal.—Tunkhannock Republican-New Age.

Suspended Sentence.

Constable Guy C. Hollon on Tuesday night arrested Arthur Donahue, aged about 19 years, at Wysox, on a charge of taking money from the clothes of John Mitten. THE "NARROWS ROAD" HAS BEEN VACATED.

Highway Along Foot of Table Rock Mountain Has Been Closed.

The dangerous "narrows road," running parallel with the Lehigh Valley tracks at East Towanda and along the foot of Table Rock mountain, is no more. The commissioners of Wysox township yesterday declared the highway from the Eastern approach to the covered wagon bridge to the Eastern approach to the James street bridge vacated, and a notice of such declaration has been filed in the prothonotary's office. This has been done on account of the completion of the James street bridge.

In the abandonment of this section of highway one of the most picturesque yet dangerous roads in Northern Pensylvania is closed to travel.

The James street bridge has not yet been accepted by the county, although it has been in use for some time. The approaches are not in satisfactory condidtion, and until they are the commissioners will refrain from asking the court to appoint a board of viewers for the purpose of passing upon the bridge in behalf of the county.

The entertainment will consist of vaudeville, or specialty acts, and will be staged under the direction of Miss Mary Welles, who is the author of a play, and has had considerable experience in the work. The entertainment promises to be the theatrical event of the season.

Received a Ducking.

Wilson Miles, Fred Johnson and Tony Schmeig received a ducking in the Susquehanna river at Homets Ferry last Sunday which they will not forget for some time. About 4:30 in the afternoon they started across the river in a boat, in which they had placed their bicycles. One of the men in changing places in the boat, stumbled and fell, upsetting the craft, and dumping all in the water. Fortunately the river was but five feet deep at that point, so all escaped with only wet jackets and chilled morrow bones.

Accidental Drowning.

'Squire Schoonover of Laquin, was in Towanda Friday making return to court in the case of the tragic death of Benjamin Artley, who was found dead in the Schrader creek on the morning of Nov. 3. The evening was one of many pleasures.

NOVEL DAMAGE SUIT

Meadville Woman Sues Newspaper For Publishing Divorce Proceedings

The publishers of the Meadville Morning Star are defendants in a peculiar suit for damages filed by Mrs. E. Pauline Snodgrass, wife of Dr. D. G. Snodgrass of that city.

Last August Mrs. Mary E. Snodgrass, former wife of Dr. Snodgrass, filed a suit for damages in the sum of $5,000 against Mrs. E. Pauline Snodgrass, wife of her divorced husband. The Star reproduced at considerable length the plaintiff's petition, which sets forth in picturesque legal verbosity devices sundry and divers alleged to have been employed by defendant to steal from plaintiff the affections of her husband.

Defendant demanded a bill of particulars. This was filed in September and was also published by the Star. Both documents were taken from the court records. It is alleged by the plaintiff in the suit against the Star that "said publication tends to bias the minds of the public, of the court, the officers, witnesses and jurors and those who may be called as jurors."

The publishers of the Star were put under a bond of $300 to appear at court. The novelty of the case has attracted wide attention in the State involving as it does the right of newspapers to publish court records. It does not appear that the Star is charged with libel.

UNIQUE GOLD PIECE.

New Style of $5 Coin Being Made in United States Mints.

The mints at Philadelphia, San Francisco and Denver have commenced coining a new $5 gold piece, struck on a different plan from any heretofore coined in the world. It follows an idea expressed to President Roosevelt by Dr. William Sturgis Bigelow, of Boston, that to permit the coins being piled to a uniform height, a high or strong relief might be obtained by depressing the design below the field or face of the coin, instead of raising it above, as usual in all coinage operations.

This would provide a fit field and a uniform thickness, the flat surface taking the wear and protecting the relief, the shape of the depression following the outline of the relief. The same design will be used on the 2.50 pieces, and all will bear "In God We Trust."

While never applied to coins, the countersinking is one of the oldest forms of sculpture in stone.

Dr. Smith Again Honored.

Dr. Pratt J. Smith, the well known dental surgeon of Towanda, has again been honored by invitation to give clinical exhibitions. The managers of the Union meeting of the Seventh and Eighth Divisions of the Dental Society of New York state, held this week at Rochester, invited Dr. Smith to give a clinic in certain work in which he is considered one of the two experts in this country. Business engagements prevent his attendance, however. The meeting was attended by many of the most prominent dentists in New York state.

ACRES OF CAMPAIGN PRINT.

Uncle Sam Paid Postal Bills for 400,000 Pounds.

The Government Printing Office was an important factor in the recent Presidential campaign. This institution turned out for the Republican and Democratic parties 7,418,700 copies of speeches delivered in Congress, surpassing all previous records by 3,000,000 copies. The total weight of campaign speeches printed since the beginning of the Sixtieth Congress exceeds 400,000 pounds, or about 14 carloads. The printed sheets would completely cover 45 square acres of ground and if each page could be laid end to end a bicycle track 947 miles long could be obtained.

The number of words contained in this year's run of speeches has been roughly estimated at 230 billion. With the newspaper calculation of four readers to each copy, this would require the assimilation of nearly a trillion words.

The printing of speeches in the Government Printing Office for members of the Senate and House of Representatives has been reduced to an exact science, through years of experience. The printing is paid for by the members of Congress drawing the requisition, but the mailing is done by frank, at public expense.

OFFICER GRIDLEY HALTED BURGLAR WITH BULLET.

Attempted Waverly Robbery Nearly Ends in the Death of the Robber.

Floyd "Rastus" Stewart, a 19 years old negro, was shot at Waverly at 1:15 o'clock yesterday morning by Night Officer Charles Gridley while trying to burglarize John Murphy's cigar store on Broad street.

While the negro was hit by a 38-calibre bullet, which punctured all his clothing, he received no worse wound than a bruise where the bullet struck. The bullet was picked up from the floor and had not been flattened in the least by its impact.

It was discovered shortly after 1 o'clock that some one was in the cigar store, and Officer Gridley was notified. He went to the store and entered by the front door. As he went in he saw a man in the store, but could not tell who it was, and he started to run out the back way. He went through the room immediately back of the main store rooms, and attempted to climb over the transom. He was ordered to halt by the officer, but paid no attention and kept going, so Gridley fired at him.

The money taken from the draw was found in Stewart's pocket. He was recently released from the Owego jail.

MANY STATE ROADS ARE NOW PROJECTED.

Western Bradford County Will Benefit By State Aid on Highways.

The prospect is reassuring for considerable more state road work in this section, and especially in Western Bradford county.

Following the survey during the Summer of an extension of the Troy township road south from the Rockwell farm about three miles to the Alba boro line, a survey has been recently made for a stretch of road from Alba to Canton boro.

A petition has also been filed for a connecting link through Alba boro and surveyors during the past week were employed gathering the necessary data for an extension of the road through Troy west toward Sylvania to the Columbia line, a distance of about two miles. In furtherance of this work Assistant Commissioner Ensign, Engineer Jackson, Assistant Engineer Pitts and Messrs. Clark, Ensign and Smith of the Highway Service have been at work for several days.

The department would not be making these surveys if it did not expect later to build the roads. Just when they will be reached is a matter of conjecture, but it will probably not be long.

Bradford county is now fully alive to the advantages of the good roads proposition and it is asking for all the road improvement it can get.

Prohibition Vote in Bradford County.

Editor of The Review:—

The Review was in error—not only as to facts—but inferences in an article of yesterday on "Prohibition Gains "The sliding scale" was not explained. My vote for congress four years ago was 1643, as I now remember it. I accepted the nomination for Representative hoping to carry the vote up. I received 482 votes, while the votes for president reached 651, with but very little done in the county. It was the local option craze that made the sliding scale, for while the electoral vote was 651 and candidates for legislative offices, state and national were victimized, and it demonstrates the viciousness of the local option propagandism. The Anti-Saloon League is a Republican party fence to keep all voters who want the liquor traffic suppressed in the Republician party. He is the complete vote on the legislative candidates.

Bolles, for State Senator 446
Meeker, for Member Congress, 490
Bowker, for Representative....453
Heermans, for Representative, 482

All other candidates received nearly as much, and some more than the electoral ticket. VanDyke received 810 votes.

am sure that a large majority of the sovereign citizens of Bradford county are opposed to the liquor traffic, and want it suppressed. The political novices, who support candidates personally pledged to local option, nominated by parties opposed to local option, deceive themselves and each other. I would like to know what the Prohibition vote in Bradford county would have been had it not been for the local option fraudulent fight and vigorously brought to the atention of the people. Faithfully,

W. S. H. HERRMANS.

Oyster Shell Window Panes.

On the west coast of India is found a species of oyster, Placuna placenta, whose shell consists of a pair of roughly circular plates about six inches in diameter, thin and white. At present these oysters are collected for the pearls which they often contain, although few are fit for the use of the jeweler. But in the early days of English rule in India the shells were employed for window panes. Cut into little squares, they produced a very pretty effect, admitting light like frosted glass. When the Bombay cathedral was built at the beginning of the eighteenth century its windows were paned with these oyster shells. In Goa they are still thus employed.—Youth's Companion.

MOVE ON TO AMEND PENNSY BALLOT LAW.

Leaders Want to Do Away With Mistakes in Marking Tickets.

Republican leaders and members of the general assembly have decided to make an effort toward the amending of the election laws in Pennsylvania, especially that section relating to ballots.

This action is the result of a repetition of the experience had four years ago, when over 100,000 Republicans failed to have their votes recorded for the Republican candidate for justice of the supreme court, and nearly 30,000 Democrats, who voted for the presidential electors, did not have their votes counted for their nominee for supreme court.

In Philadelphia alone, at the election of Tuesday of last week, 41,315 Republicans who cast their ballots for Taft and Sherman were not recorded as voting for the re-election of Judge W. D. Porter to the supreme court, the nominee of the Republican state convention, against whom not a word was said throughout the cmaapign.

On the Democratic side there were 28,695 Philadelphians who voted for Bryan for president on Nov. 3, who did not have their votes counted for Senator Grim, whose name appeared upon the Democratic ticket as the candidate for the superior court. What happened in this particular in Philadelphia was the experience in every county in the state.

It is estimated that the official count will show that the Republican nominee for superior court in Pennsylvania will run over 100,000 votes behind Taft, and that the Democratic candidate for judge will have a proportionate loss.

This is due to the confusion over the proper method of marking the ticket arising from the form in which the ballot is printed.

While the managers of both of the larger parties sent out explicit instructions to their followers to put a cross mark in the square after the party name in the first column on the ballot, many voters misconstrued these directions and simply put a cross mark in the square after the words Republican vs. Democratic, just over the list of presidential electors in the second and third columns of the ballot respectively; the second for the Republicans and the third for the Democrats.

By so marking their ballot citizens simply voted for the nominees for presidential elections and were not recorded for judge of the superior court, congressman, legislators of the local nominees.

The aim of the party managers is to present a form of a ballot that will make such mistakes impossible.

They have concluded to put through an amendment to the ballot law providing that the name of the party shall be directly over the column in which all the nominees of that party shall be printed. Under the name of the party will be a large circle where the voter can place a cross mark, which will indicate his intention to vote for the full ticket of that party.

This will be similar to the method adopted in New York, where the parties, in addition to having the party name, have also a party symbol over the column containing the names of the nominees of that party.

There will probably be other changes in the act suggested to meet objections that have been raised both by regulars and independents to the present form of the ballot.

ATE EVERYTHING IN SIGHT, DRANK INK AND DIED.

Strange Mania of Martin Smith, Inmate of Luzerne County Asylum.

Martin Smith, an inmate of the insane asylum at Retreat, Luzerne county, died Sunday from drinking a bottle of indelible ink. His home was in Plymouth before he was admitted to the institution.

Smith had a mania for eating and drinking everything he could lay hold of. One favorite occupation he had was to tear up strips of cloth and chew them. Wads of paper or pieces of wood were included in his diet.

When the autopsy was performed, his stomach contained pieces of wood, glass, paper, cloth and other indigestible articles.

His act in drinking the ink was not animated with suicidal impulse. He simply had a habit of going after everything, and eating or drinking it, and the keepers watched him closely. He lived 12 hours after putting the ink away.

POMONA GRANGE, 23

The Quarterly Session Was Held With Spring Hill Grange.

NEW SECRETARY WAS CHOSEN

Mrs. F. C. Spear of Milan, Succeeds Mrs. J. S. Mott of West Franklin, Who Has Served Most Acceptably—Interesting Program—Resolutions.

The fourth quarterly meeting of Bradford and Sullivan Counties Pomona Grange was held with Spring Hill Grange Nov. 6 and 7. The Patrons there are ideal entertainers, they are progressive and up-to-date farmers, in short Spring Hill seems to be a model country community Visitors coming by train were met at Wyalusing and conveyed to the Grange hall. Attendance was not so large as it would have been had the weather continued warm, but all enjoyed a very pleasant meeting; and was profitable so far as the ideas advanced are put into practical use.

Thursday morning session opened with Worthy Master Shaw presiding; minutes of last meeting and reports of subordinate Granges were read; all but five of the 38 Grangses in the district having sent reports. Total membership in the two counties 4361.

The following questions were discussed:

How can the farmers co-operate more successfully?

Do Patrons buy and sell as advantageously as they should.

What is the best way to cut and care for corn fodder without silo?

Is it proper for gatekeeper or steward to admit members during opening exercises?

Thursday Afternoon.

Opened with music. A hearty welcome was extended to the visitors by the Master of Spring Hill Grange, Roy S. Blocher, with response by Master of Pomona Grange, C. P. Shaw.

Miss Daisy Shumway read a paper on the life of Lord Alfred Tennyson, which was enjoyed and appreciated.

The Spring Hill Male Quartette, composed of Messrs. Blocher, Ackley, Westcott and Tyler, rendered a selection and responded to an encore.

A discussion on "Greatest Benefits to be Derived from the Grange," "Association of one Farmer With Another," G. M. Lyon. "There We Make Friends, Than Which Nothing is Better," Y. W. Pratt. "Educational Feature," Piollet. "Sometimes Too Much Stress is Laid on Financial Feature," Snyder. "Confidence in One's Ability to Speak in Public and Exchange of Opinion," C. M. Homet. Question Box. "What is the meaning of the word 'Grange?' A farm home.

Question Box. "What is the meaning of the word 'Grange?' "In what should the Pomona be instructive to the Subordinate Granges?" "It should be a model in conducting business, teaching principles and in co-operation." "Under what circumstances has a Master the right to declare an office vacant?" National Grange says, "After four consecutive meetings have been missed." "Which is more profitable to sell, milk or cream?"

Closed for fifth degree meeting, where the degree of Pomona was conferred on a class of eight, and important business transacted.

Friday Evening.

This was an open session and opened with a song by 20 members of the Juvenile Grange.

Talk on corn, by G. M. Lyon. He told of its origin and history and of its value. Advocates Fall plowing, and clover sod as soil best fitted to growing corn, and emphasizes the value of obtaining the best seed possible.

Hon. Louis Piollet spoke for a few minutes on "The Greatest Need of the Farmer." He says it is education, necessarily along several lines. Grange has made it possible to a certain extent. The Grange is demanding a High school for every township.

The speaker of the evening, Samuel E. Eastman, D.D., pastor of Park Church, Elmira, was introduced. His talk on "The Farmer's High Calling" was a rare privilege to those present.

God's call to the farm is as high a calling as to the pulpit. The farmer some time will have letters after his name—perhaps D. A.—Doctor of Agriculture. Farmer is caled to grow—cabbage, calves and character.

A dead sure sign of physical life is hunger; if there is no mental and intellectual hunger, we are mentally dying. The possibilities in the use of one's mind and leisure time are very great. Cultivate the ability to appreciate the beautiful in nature, and keep open door to the spirit of life.

Guy Wells gave a whistling solo and the meeting was closed by a song by the Male Quartette.

Opened with music. Question Box. "What is the most economical kind of grain feed to use in connection with corn fodder?" "What is the experience in feeding ensilage to horses?"

At this time the installation by Past Master A. S. Stevens, Mrs. F. C. Spear, Milan, Pa., and Mrs. C. P. Shaw, who had been elected secretary, and Flora, respectively, to fill the vacancies caused by the resignation of Mrs. J. S. Mott, and Miss Lulu Mott, took place.

State Deputies report the condition of the order at present as good, with one or two exceptions; three Granges are building new halls.

Committee on resolutions make the following report, which was adopted as read:

Whereas, At our recent election men were elected who pledged themselves to Grange policies; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this Pomona Grange, now in session at Spring Hill, ask them to use all honorabale means to procure legislation of benefit to the farmers, such as larger appropriations for our public schools, state roads, and a more just equalization of taxes.

Whereas, Our local taxes are excessive and burdensome to the real estate owners; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we urge that our County Commissioners and others in authority, use more economy in the expenditure of our public money.

Resolved, That we, as members of Pomona Grange No. 23, recommend that the State Grange reduce the tax per capita of members of subordinate Granges back to six cents as formerly, instead of the present sum—seven cents—as there is a large surplus in the State treasury, and officers' salaries are increasing, making it a pecuniary object for seeking the office rather than the good of the Order.

Resolved, That we, as a Pomona Grange, wish to express publicly our regret at the resignation of our Secretary, Mrs. J. S. Mott, and we extend to her our grateful appreciation of her faithful services and her untiring energy, having missed but one meeting during her term of office; and we give to her our loving wishes and hope the future has in store for her and those dear to her the best this world can offer. We also accept with regret the resignation of Sister Lulu Mott, as Flora, and would add that our loss will surely be some one else's gain.

Resolved, That we, the visiting brothers and sisters, extend to the members of Spring Hill Grange, our grateful appreciation of the bounteous and cordial hospitality extended to us during our stay here, and our enjoyment of the talent displayed for our entertainment, especially the singing of the Juvenile Grange, and would recommend that other granges follow their example and organize a Juvenile Grange.

Signed—Hon. Louis Piollet, G. M. Lyon, C. F. Hunsinger, Mrs. Westcott, Mrs. W. S. Reynolds.

"Is it economy to rod your buildings as a protection against lightning?"

"Can anyone be a good Patron and not be a temperance man?"

"Should Patrons receive the preference for public office, other qualifications being equal?"

A practical talk on co-operative buying followed, Brother Snyder giving some of the experiences of Spring Hill Grange in buying feed, cement, clover seed, etc.

After a Grange song the meeting was brought to a close. The February meeting will be held in Troy.

MRS. F. C. SPEAR, Secretary.

KILLING OF APHTHOUS VICTIMS COMMENCED.

Barns in Which Animals Were Kept Will Have to Be Burned.

A news dispatch from Danville, this state, says:

"Killing of cattle afflicted with aphthous fever, or foot and mouth disease, as ordered by federal government officials, began in four counties of this state Saturday. The methods prescribed by law for the wholesale disposition of cattle killed by the state are cremation, boiling in steam and burial in places distant from streams. The latter method will be employed here.

"Dr. Pearson in an interview stated that the outbreak is most seriously regarded, and that the danger of contagion is great. After the cattle are killed the barns will be disinfected, straw and manure removed and burned. Even the hay will have to be destroyed.

"The barns in most cases will have to be gutted out, the stalls and other wood work removed. Even the floors must be torn up and burned.

"Dr. Pearson expects, even with the rigid quarantine in force, that the disease will spread. Pigeons, even birds flying from farm to farm are likely to carry the disease. The farmers are urged for their own safety and the safety of their fellow agriculturists to report any suspicious symptoms noticed among the cattle at once to the state authorities.

"The milk supply is the great avenue through which the disease may be carried to human beings and the board recommends the boiling of all milk."

"S-s-s-sus-say, ma," stammered Bobby through the suds as his mother scrubbed and scrubbed him, "I guess you want to get rid o' me, don't you?"

"Why, no, Bobby, dear," replied his mother. "What ever put such an idea as that into your mind?"

"Oh, nothin'!" said Bobby. "Only it seems to me you're tryin' to rub me out."—Harper's Weekly.

GILLETTE COUPLE IN A VERY SAD PLIGHT.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Powers Reach Binghamton in Search of Health.

A news dispatch from Binghamton, says:

"Sad was the story told by a woman taken to police headquarters Saturday afternoon when found wandering aimlessly about the streets timidly asking the way to find a hotel where she said she had left her ill husband and little daughter.

"To the police inquiries she said her name was Mrs. Stanley Powers, aged 47, and that she had left Gillett, Pa., with her husband, now in the last stages of tuberculosis, because some one had told her that a change of air would benefit his failing health. Her destination was North Fenton, she said, where Mr. Powers had relatives.

"From her description it was learned that the sick man was at the Richmond Hotel. They left Saturday evening to continue their journey, though Mr. Powers is so ill that he can walk only a very short distance."

BRIDGE TO BE BUILT AT STANDING STONE.

County Commissioners Advertise for Bids for Proposed Structure.

A county bridge is to be constructed across the Susquehanna river connecting Standing Stone and Asylum townships. In this week's Reporter-Journal bids are asked for the building of the sub and superstructures in accordance with plans and specifications now on file in the county commissioner's office.

The location for the proposed bridge is at Storrs Ferry, almost directly opposite the Lehigh Valley depot at Standing stone. It is proposed to build a good substantial bridge for there is a great deal of travel at that point, and a ferry boat poled or cabled along is too far behind the times for progressive Bradford county.

The bids for the new structure will be opened by the commissioners at 2 p. m., Dec. 2.

IS THE INVESTMENT SAFE?

A friend makes inquiry as to the wisdom of purchasing land as far west as Martin county, Tex., which the map shows to be about a hundred miles west of the one hundredth meridian. Generally speaking, the ninety-ninth meridian is accepted as the agricultural "dead line," west of which there is little use to break up the soil for tillage purposes. A glance at any civil map of the United States will show how uniformly the western tide of settlement has stopped at this line, as shown by the location of towns. As indicated in this way, it is seen to run in almost a direct line from the northern boundary of North Dakota through to southern Texas. It is true that during the past six or seven years the rainfall has been sufficiently heavy, so that fair success in purely agricultural pursuits has been had on lands lying quite a distance west of this line, while the breaking up of considerable areas may have had a modifying effect on drought conditions. But a cycle of dry years is quite likely to come, and it is conditions which will prevail in such seasons that the land seeker should take note of if he has in mind purchasing a permanent farm home. The earmarks of this dry country, which is not lacking in fertility, but in moisture, are buffalo grass, sagebrush and cactus. Where herbage of this kind abounds more conclusive evidence is furnished of the unwisdom of purchasing for tillage purposes than in any "spiel" the agent may make, unless, indeed, irrigation is possible, when the situation is entirely altered. The investing of from $2,000 to $6,000 or $7,000 in a quarter section of land is a serious move as well as an important one for the man of limited means who has had to work hard for his savings. The step should be taken only after thorough, sober and careful investigation. Better a fellow should spend $200 acquainting himself thoroughly with a prospective land purchase than to buy in haste and find out later that he has been deceived and swindled.

LADIES TEACHING FARMING.

An interesting fact noted by a leading western educator, State Superintendent Bishop of Nebraska, who is a pioneer in the field of agricultural education in the rural schools, is the prominent part which lady county superintendents of schools are taking in the matter of introducing these subjects into the courses of study in the schools under their charge. One Nebraska lady superintendent has 700 children at work in agricultural classes, while one residing in a southern Iowa county has issued a special bulletin dealing with practical scientific agricultural subjects. Some idea of the interest which the department of public instruction in Nebraska is taking in this line of work may be gained from the fact that arrangements have been made by Mr. Bishop to hold the conventions of the Nebraska Boys' Agricultural society and the Nebraska Girls' Domestic Science association in Omaha during the national corn exposition, which, it is estimated, will be attended by 3,000 boys and girls of the state.

A COSTLY LESSON.

While the numerous forest fires which raged in so many states during September and October are deplorable from almost every point of view, it is more than likely that they will serve a real mission in calling the attention of the people of the country to the immediate necessity of the inauguration of radical and vigorous measures for the protection and conservation of the nation's rapidly diminishing forest resources, which will include not only the planting of new areas to forest trees, but the patrolling of present national and state reserves in such manner as to prevent or at least greatly decrease the enormous losses which have resulted in the present year from the one cause of forest fires. This lesson of forest preservation is one that we are very slow to learn as a people, a costly experience such as we have had the present year being about the only way it could be effectively impressed.

STUFFING TOO MUCH.

The draft horse that has been working hard all summer sometimes gets stocked up and out of condition when the slack season arrives as a result of too little exercise and too much feeding. Much the same condition is apt to prevail in the case of the man of middle age who after many years of strenuous outdoor life with the vigorous appetite which this type of life has developed sells or rents his farm and comes to town and has little to do besides the light chores about the house and sometimes not that. In both cases the only safeguard is a material reduction in the bill of fare and taking of a good bit of exercise every day, even if it is nothing more than walking.

The unloaded gun and the gentle bull are usually the causes of more mischief than the other kind.

Industrial education and labor on the land carried on logically and intelligently are the two great safeguards against plutocracy and anarchy.

The old tabby cat is probably one of the best mouse exterminators to be had, and yet many a housewife considers it a Hobson's choice as between the cat and the mice.

A prominent fruit grower and apple raiser tells us that he would rather have the pigs clean up the windfalls in his orchard than spray his trees if he wanted to secure fruit free from blemishes.

The time honored controversy touching the culinary skill of a fellow's mother and his new wife is largely, though not always, traceable to the fact that in the latter case a trifle of the edge has been worn off the small boy's appetite.

In an experiment conducted by the Michigan experiment station it was found that the growing of cowpeas added to the soil 139 pounds of nitrogen per acre, while soja beans added 112 pounds per acre. In either case the nitrogen added was worth from 15 to 20 cents per pound.

Those who took the pains to sow rape in their cornfields early in July now have a nice supply of succulent green feed which will be relished by their stock well into the winter. The sheep should not be allowed the run of the rape field when the plants are wet from rain or dew.

Many an old orchard which has come into a rundown and unprofitable condition through neglect may be considerably rejuvenated and put on a paying basis by breaking up the sod and by a course of systematic pruning and spraying operations, with the application of sufficient fertilizers to equalize a depleted soil condition.

There is little question that if the person who is occupied in indoor sedentary pursuits devotes on hour to vigorous outdoor exercise he can get more work out of the way in the remaining working hours than if he should spend the entire period in his tasks and take no recreation. While the truth of this statement is generally recognized, it is in all too many cases ignored.

Often a large per cent of the heat value of fuel—particularly soft coal—is not realized because so much coal is put on the fire that proper combustion of the fuel and consumption of the soot and gases does not take place. The addition of much smaller amounts of fuel at somewhat more frequent intervals will tend to correct the difficulty, resulting in a maximum heat value from the fuel consumed.

Cement floors for stables and feed sheds and where possible feed yards have two important points in their favor—they are much more easily cleaned and the manure which accumulates does not lose any considerable part of its fertilizing value through leeching, which is the case in the average barn and feed lot. The initial expense of the cement improvements referred to is considerable, but in a period of years they would be more than paid for in the saving made possible in the handling of the manures.

The judicious use of a telephone in the mere matter of keeping oneself posted as to the prices of stock and produce will frequently in the course of a month or less pay for the cost of the telephone service for the year. Besides this, there is the saving of time in the matter of sending word to neighbors when extra help is needed, while in the case of fire or sickness the benefit can hardly be estimated. In the larger social aspect the presence of a phone in the home does much to lessen the monotony and lonesomeness which might otherwise exist.

While the benefits to be derived from the growing of clover are quite generally recognized, it is worth while now and then to express this benefit in a definite form. In a recent experiment conducted by the Michigan agricultural station it was found that when oats were sown following mixed grasses without clover the yield was thirty-six bushels per acre, while following grasses sown with clover they gave a yield of forty-six bushels. In a like experiment with barley substituted for oats the yields were respectively thirty-eight and forty-nine bushels per acre. A similar experiment conducted by the Alabama station showed that following cowpeas the yield of cotton was increased 696 pounds per acre.

Some of the overzealous promoters of a beet sugar factory which has lately been erected in northern Iowa have had articles published to the effect that the growing of beets enriched rather than impoverished the land. It would be a matter for congratulation if this statement were only true, but the fact of the matter is it is not. It is true that beets do not pull on the fertility of the soil quite as heavily as do onions, wheat or oats, this being due to the fact that, like corn, they draw their sugar content largely from the air and sunshine. But to assert that they enrich the soil, as do clovers, is entirely erroneous and in the end will be of no advantage to the beet raising industry. A man not posted might be induced to grow beets because of the above claim, but his own experience with them would in a very short time disprove the claim.

While an excellent feed for the milk cow, millet is too stiff and rich a feed for horses, having much the same effect on them as does clover, which is exceptionally rich in protein.

While most vegetable products keep best in low temperatures, squashes, pumpkins and cucumbers are an exception, keeping longer if the air is somewhat warmer and drier.

They say that a goose will live to be seventy years old, though just why this bird should be so long lived it is hard to see when the more useful hen lays and cackles herself out inside of four or five years.

Fresh air is one of the most inexpensive things at one's disposal, yet it is worth while remembering that those who live much in it and breath much of it are not only the best physical, but moral types that the country has.

Spraying work done in the orchard in an even greater degree than the fertilizing of land produces a cumulative effect—that is, an application given one season produces a beneficial result covering a period of several succeeding years.

There is none of the root crops which pull as heavily on the strength of the soil as do onions. This means that unless the soil on which they are grown is new and very rich the land should be re-enforced with barnyard manure or commercial fertilizers after the crop has been grown one or two seasons.

An Ohio inventor claims to have secured a product from everyday skimmilk called omsite, which rolls as thin as paper and is even more pliable and which is not affected in the least by the most intense heat. The new article certainly has an interesting future before it if the above claims and others made for it are true.

As is true in the natural world, the mind of the normal boy and girl abhors a vacuum. It is on this account that if they are not provided with wholesome reading for their leisure hours they will get hold of that which is worthless or pernicious. In this respect parents have a very great as well as a very plain responsibility and one that they should by no means neglect.

It is remarkable in how short a time a farm which has been kept in a state of fertility and productivity will deteriorate under a slipshod management which is content with grain raising and selling and is too lazy to embark in stock raising and dairying. The process of soil depletion under the above circumstances is as sure as death and taxes and merely a matter of rapid subtraction.

There have been found stored in the earth vast and abundant supplies of rock phosphate, but no considerable stores of nitrogen. Nature has made good for this seeming oversight by charging the air with a wealth of nitrogen and giving us the legume or clover family, which is endowed with the power to draw these supplies of nitrogen from the air and deposit it in the soil by means of their root systems.

Happy is the housewife who has adopted that philosophy of life which makes it possible for her to snap her fingers at a little dust and devote some of her time to a few things that are of a good deal more concern than plain dirt, which doesn't spoil and seldom blows away. The above is not to be construed as a justification for slovenliness or filth, but to point to a fact which many well meaning women often overlook.

A fond hope is entertained by many of the sterner sex that the time is not far distant when the sensible women of America—and this includes a large majority of them—will formulate and publish an ultimatum declaring their freedom in the matter of headgear and wearing apparel from the dictates of a batch of harebrained persons holding forth in Paris. American men decided two years ago that they would not be bound by the presence or absence of creases in King Edward's trousers.

Pedro's Estella, a Jersey cow owned by the Missouri experiment station, completed in June last a year's test, in which she produced 712.12 pounds of butter, thus entitling her to the three-year-old butter record for the Jersey breed. The cost of the feed for this cow for the twelve months was $80. The receipts from butter sold were $234.96 and $22.12 realized from the sale of 8,850 pounds of skimmilk. The above income was five times as large as was received from the average Missouri cow, while the cost of Estella's feed was double that of the average.

The blue grass pasture is, one year with another, one of the most profitable portions of the average farm and should be held in higher esteem. While there is seldom enough manure to adequately fertilize the plow land of the farm, it would often be a matter of real economy to scatter some fertilizer on the pasture rather than to allow it to leech in the yards, and this holds especially true at times of the year when the cultivated land is occupied with growing crops. Put on the pasture in scant quantities, the fertilizing elements would be utilized immediately with real advantage to the often hungry pastures.

The Retort Courteous.

A lady passing through the negro quarter in Mobile, Ala., heard an old woman chanting a dirgelike tune.

"Auntie," she observed, "that is a mournful song you are singing."

"Yassum," was the response, "I knows it's mo'nful, but by singin' dat song an' 'tendin' to my own business I spects to git to heaben."

His Luck.

"I have been engaged to at least a dozen girls," said a young man.

"And always been unlucky in love, eh?" inquired a lady.

"Oh, no—rather lucky!" was the answer. "I've never married any of them!"

Which Foot Walks Faster?

You may think this a very silly question to ask, but it isn't. It is a simple, demonstrable fact, which you can prove to your own satisfaction in a very few minutes. If you will take a pavement that is clear, so that there will be no interference, and walk briskly in the center, you will find that before you have gone fifty yards you have veered very much to one side. You must not make any effort, of course, to keep in the center, but if you will think of something and endeavor to walk naturally you cannot keep a direct line. The explanation of this lies in the propensity of one foot to walk faster than the other, or one leg takes a longer stride than the other, causing one to walk to one side. You can try an experiment in this way by placing two sticks about eight feet apart, then stand off about sixty feet, blindfold yourself and endeavor to walk between them. You will find it almost impossible.

Why Not Be an Egotist?

There is much mistaken sentiment as to the sin of egotism. The fact is egotism is not a sin. On the other hand, it is somewhat of a virtue and an indispensable element in all real progress. Some phases of egotism are unpleasant to the beholder and unfortunate for the possessor, but if all of self love, or, rather, the love of other people's admiration and good will, were to be extinguished there would be little to hold society together and less to give impetus to the great enterprises which spring from individual thought and culminate in personal profit.—Leslie's Weekly.

Detective Guy C. Hollon and Justice Orcutt of Towanda, went to Sayre on Saturday, and summoned 23 young Sayre citizens to appear before Justice Nelson. The claim against them was for money that was loaned to them by Mr. Hollon while at Towanda. They all settled, and the matter was dropped without further litigation.

INSTITUTE COMES TO A CLOSE.

Annual Meeting of Bradford County Teachers Ended Friday Afternoon.

UNDOUBTEDLY THE BEST INSTITUTE EVER HELD HERE

That Was the General Opinion of the Teachers and the Instructors—Attendance Was Good All Week, and Remained So Until Last Minute.

The annual Bradford county teachers' institute came to a close Friday afternoon, Nov. 13, after a five days' session. Following will be found the proceedings of Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Monday and Tuesday's proceedings were published in last week's issue:

Wednesday Morning.

As with the Bradford County fair, so with the County Institute, each are said to be sure to bring rain, and the first rainy day of the session came Wednesday. However, time for opening found practically all the teachers in their seats; at least the seats were well filled, and in the darkness which prevailed in the opera house, it is assumed they were teachers.

The morning session was called to order by Superintendent Putnam, the usual time devoted to music, and Principal F. S. Woolson of Camptown, conducted the devotional exercises.

"The Spelling Problem" was the theme of the first lesson of the day. Dr. Becht was the instructor. This talk was of the great practical value to teachers of spelling. One point he made should lead to the reform of certain abuses which have been handed down from year to year, one in particular being the habit of having the spelling class the last thing in the afternoon, at which time it is either crowded for time or omitted entirely for the day. Every teacher who finds herself excusing the spelling classes should place it somewhere else on the program.

A great treat to teachers of reading and literature now followed. Dr. Winship talked on "Great Authors." He divided authors into four classes, viz: great authors, authors who might have become great, those who may yet become great, and those who are a present delight. Teachers should place all authors read or studied in one of these classes; however, an author's class cannot be determined till he has been dead at least ten years.

There are three ways of knowing a great writer, viz: He shall produce something that shall live, the artistic perfection of the work done; those that have done something so great as to place them in the class with great British authors. America has few of the last class, yet Emmerson, he thinks, stands above any British essayist. Of poems picturing scenes, he places Whittier, author of "Snow Bound," at the top, and classifies with him the Irish poet, Goldsmith, author of "The Deserted Village," and the English poet Gray, famous for his elegy written in a "Country Churchyard," and said that any poet who can et in this class will become great. He named N. P. Willis and Bayard Taylor as two examples of writers whose names were once on every tongue but whose fame has not endured.

Principal Rogers announced a meeting of the executive committee of the Educational association at the court house.

Principal DeLaney of Sayre, chairman of the committee on resolutions, presented the question of the advisability of holding a county spelling contest. The question was discussed by Principals Allen of Rome, Woolson of Camptown, and Denison of Troy. Dr. Winship explained the scheme as used in another state in conducting these contests. On motion of Principal Rogers, a resolution was unanimously adopted favoring the appointing by the superintendent of a committee to devise ways and means for holding a county spelling contest.

The closing event of the forenoon was an address on "Horace Mann," by Dr. Fess.

Wednesday Afternoon.

The electric lights were turned on in the afternoon and things took on a more cheerful appearance than in the semi-darkness of the forenoon session.

"Rational Treatment of Children" was Dr. Becht's closing theme. He believes that children should be treated as children, and that the period of childhood should be lengthened rather than shortened. The child should have an opportunity to develop in all his faculties, and not have all his other faculties dwarfed in order to develop some one faculty abnormally.

"The Webster Hayne Debate" was the second topic of the afternoon. In this, Dr. Fess gave a fine review of that famous debate of ante bellum days. One important point of interest to students is that Calhoun and Hayne differed widely from Jefferson, in that the latter believed in state rights, while Calhoun and Hayne believed in state of souvergnity. Dr. Fess painted those stirring scenes in the senate chamber with such vividness that the audience was held spell-bound during his entire address of 45 minutes.

Superintendent Putnam now introduced Deputy State Superintendent Teitrick, who spoke on "Laws of Teaching.' Superintendent Teitrick says he has not yet met that teacher who can properly conduct a recitation in any subject who does not spend some time in daily preparation, even though he has taught the same subject the year before in the same book. The teacher who does not plan out his work before going before the class dissipates the time of the class. The teacher may know the subject, but he needs to scan each lesson with a view to teaching the lesson. This applies even to teaching primary classes. The strong teacher is the one who knows all the while just how he is going to do a thing nad when to do it.

Dr. Winship continued his work on authors, his immediate topic being "Authors I Have Known."

Adjournment was taken at 4 o'clock.

Thursday Morning.

The fourth day of the session came to order at 9 o'clock. After the usual time was given to singing, Principal Delaney of Sayre, led in the devotional exercises.

Dr. Winship changed his subject as listed on the program, and talked instead on district schools. He believes that in many respects the ungraded rural school has possibilities that cannot be attained by the large graded schools. The teacher also has greater opportunities to show her capacities in those schools than elsewhere. His lecture teemed with timely advice and apt illustrations.

Supt. Teitrick continued his talk on "Laws of Teaching," the immediate topic being the recitation. One of the principal causes of poor work is the failure to master the art of questioning by the teachers. The lack of interest and inattention on the part of the pupils are largely due to the same cause. Too much routine work and also too many written lessons detract from the interest. Care should be taken in the assignment of lessons that the pupil may not waste his time on the nonessentials. Supt. Tietrick is a practical school man, and his talks are listened to with close attention. If teachers carry these laws into effect in their schools, more and better work will be done.

Following a rest in singing, the superintendent announced that Sheriff Griffin had invited the teachers to visit the jail, and that the Bradford County Historical society would be pleased to have all the teachers call at the historical rooms. He also explained some things in regard to the method of conducting and providing for the expense of the evening entertainments, and asked each teacher to make a written report of his or her views on the subject.

Principal Denison, chairman of the queries committee, submitted several questions. Dr. Winship, in answering several, said that he would make no rule as to whether a left handed pupil should be compelled to write with his right hand; that he would teach the elements of stocks and bonds to the seventh grade because so many boys leave school before the eighth grade; that educators and business men differ as to the advisability of teaching more than one method of computing interest.

Dr. Fess answered several questions, and said: He would give English history an equal amount of time with general history; that he would not interrupt a pupil during his reading to correct an error, but at the end unless great skill is exercised in doing so; that in his exeprience mass institutes accomplish more than if divided into sections.

Thursday Afternoon.

The session came to order at 1:30 o'clock. The superintendent announced a business meeting of the Bradford County Educational association at the grand jury room at 4 o'clock. As a committee on the spelling contest, he appointed Principals Humphries, Rogers, Denison, Woolson and Morrow.

"A Study in American Political Theory" was Dr. Fess' last address. In this talk, he traced admission of the new states and showed how the equilibrium of the number of senators from the free and slave states was maintained, and the stirring events which brought on the Mexican war, and later on to civil strife. Dr. Fess is a master on this subject, and his picture of scenes, and the intellectual giants who participated in those critical times, must be heard to be appreciated. The audience was carried away with admiration and interest.

"Making Manly Boys" was Dr. Winship's subject. He divided the boy's life into three divisions. The first six years should culminate in physical freedom, the second six years in intelectual recognition, the third six in moral responsibility.

While teachers can apply the principles laid down by Dr. Winship, every parent in the county ought to have heard this address. Many home tragedies would be prevented if some of his logic were applied in every home.

One of the best of many of the good things of the day was the last address of the afternoon by Deputy State Superintendent Teitrick, on "My Boy's Teacher." He wants his boy's teacher to be progressive, one who can bring things to pass, who is resourceful, in addition to educational and moral qualities, the latter two all are supposed to have.

The session closed with singing at 4 o'clock.

Friday Morning.

The delightful weather that prevailed the opening day was duplicated on the closing day. Although the schoolmasters and school mistresses are somewhat tired from the strenuous work of the first four days, yet their enthusiasm does not seem to have abated.

Prof. Jerry March has succeeded in getting more real music out of the singing periods than has ever been done before.

"Washington and Jefferson" was the first address. Dr. Winship said in substance that Washington's greatness rests on his broad character and general achievements, while Jefferson's fame comes from two specific achievements, the writing of the Declaration of Independence and the purchase of Louisiana.

Jefferson is in a class by himself while Washington is great not because of any one specific act, but from his great strength of character, virtuous life, and conservative statesmanship. To Jefferson probably no other man would have been so constituted, that he could seize upon the opportunity when Louisiana was offered to him by France, although the act appeared to be inconsistent with all his previous acts and utterances. He advised teachers in teaching history to dwell on the lives of such men as Washington and Lincoln in their fullness, but in the lives of such men as Hamilton and Jefferson on those particular acts which make them stand out in history. In teaching the lives of men, teach only those acts and characteristics which have made them great.

Superintendent Teitrick continued his talk on "My Boy's Teacher." This, like all of Supt. Teitrick's talks, was both interesting and profitable. One feature he dwelt upon was that every boy's teacher should have a sunny disposition, and that teachers sometimes drive pulpils out of school by lack of sympathy and encouragement.

"Two Great Ends of Elementary Education" was the last address of the forenoon.

Mrs. C. R. Stiles of the Towanda talked particularly of the work of the first four grades. One of the cardinal ends of elementary education is character foundation. Insist that every child produce his best work. He should learn to do what is told, when, and how he is told. Put a premium on honest work, and discourage copying. Care should be exercised in marking class grades in the primary department. Too many teachers mark beginners too high simply because they are beginners, and incidentally remove the incentive that they would otherwise have for improvement. If pupils are marked 98 to 100 per cent. right at the start, his marks must gradually go down instead of up as they should go, and the children are discouraged as they naturally must be. Too many teachers make this mistake. In marking examination papers, she said, they should be marked with a view to how much credit it is possible to give, rather than how much can be marked off on each question. Habits of neatness and accuracy should be established during the first years of school. The correct use of capital letters and periods must be taught thoroughly. She repeated in closing the importance of judicious marking of the pupils standing, so that the marks may go up as the pupils progress through the grades.

On request of the superintendent, the members voted to have an educational exhibit at the next meeting of the Educational Association. One thing in particular that stress will be placed on is penmanship. He also called attention to the announcements made in the hand book about examinations. Particulars as to just what must be done to secure renewal of professional certificates will be given at the teacher's meeting to be held later. He wishes every teacher to read Dinsmore's "The District School," and explained the purpose of the teacher's meetings to be held throughout the county, and said that every teacher is expected to be present. No flimsy excuse will be accepted for absence.

Blanks and Institute Manuals were distributed to the first teacher on the list of each township and borough, who acting as a committee, will distribute the same to the teachers and directors of their respective districts.

Friday Afternoon.

Dr. March, the musical director, had to leave on an early train in order to fill his regular Friday evening appointment with his choir in Wanamaker's Sunday school, and Miss Carolyn H. Brown, director of music of the Sayre schools, had charge of the singing.

Superintendent Teitrick concluded his discussion of "My Boy's Teacher." In addition to the requirements that the teacher shall be patient and sympahetic, he must be exacting and compel the best work. He believes that teachers should keep some specific record of the daily results produced by each pupil, that the work of each pupil in each subject shall be regularly sized up.

The following committee was appointed by Superintendent Putnam on the Educational Exhibit for the Educational association: L. E. DeLaney of Sayre, chairman; J. A. Chrestensin of Canton, R. B. Allen of Rome, J. H. Ballentine of New Albany, Paul E. Dimock of Smithfield, Grace N. Sayles of Troy, Bertha B. Espy of Towanda, Josephine Gore of Athens, C. B. Bresler of Wyalusing, James Bowles of South Waverly, and W. T. Clarke of Ulster.

Mrs. Stiles gave her second talk, this time on "Do You Teach the Pupil or Subject, Which?" She presented a strong argument in favor of teaching the pupil. She was roundly applauded.

Principal Bowles of the auditing committee, presented the following report of that committee on the finances of the year 1907:

Principal DeLaney of the resolutions committee, reported with resolutions thanking Superintendent Putnam and the instructors, the Germania orchestra and the people of Towanda for their part in making the institute a success.

J. H. Humphries on behalf of the reading course for teachers, reported the result of their deliberations. They recommended Dinsmore's Teaching of the Rural School, Tanner's Child Study and Schmucher's Study of Nature. He also reported that plans for conducting the spelling contest will be sent out later, but that lists of words can be obtained by writing Superintendent Loose of Williamsport, and A. Flanigan & company of Chicago.

Dr. Winship made his farewell address, Superintendent Putnam made some announcements, the audience sang "America," and the 1908 institute was a matter of history. It is generally conceded that it was one of the most successful institutes ever held. Many students availed themselves of the opportunity to hear the high class instructors and attended throughout the week, and many citizens and directors attended some of the sessions, the Germania orchestra furnished delightful music, and every evening entertainment was well received by the large audiences present.

The First Cookbook.

To the Romans belong the honor of having produced the first European cookery book, and, though the authorship is uncertain, it is generally attributed to Caelius Apicus, who lived under Trajan, 114 A. D. Here are two recipes from this ancient collection:

"First, for a sauce to be eaten with boiled fowl, put the following ingredients into a mortar: Aniseed, dried mint and lazer root. Cover them with vinegar, add dates and pour in liquamen (a distilled liquor made from large fish which were salted and allowed to turn putrid in the sun), oil and a small quantity of mustard seeds. Reduce all to a proper thickness with sweet wine warmed, and then pour this same over your chicken, which should previously be boiled in aniseed water."

The second recipe shows the same queer mixture of ingredients: "Take a wheelbarrow of rose leaves and pound in a mortar; add to it brains of two pigs and two thrushes boiled and mixed with the chopped up yoke of egg, oil, vinegar, pepper and wine. Mix and pour these together and stew them steadily and slowly till the perfume is developed."—Chambers' Journal.
